ATROCITY REPORT PROBE ORDERED

Truman Accepts Eric Johnston's Resignation As ESA's Chieftain

Departure Nov. 30 Speeds Efforts To Find Successor To Lead Fight Against Inflation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP) — President Truman accepted the resignation of Eric Johnston as head of the Economic Stabilization Agency today "with real regret" and "extreme reluctance."

Johnston, who has been trying to get back to his job as president of the Motion Pictures Association, will now leave the government Nov. 30.

The acceptance of the resignation was announced at Mr. Truman's vacation headquarters in Key West, Fla. In an exchange of letters, Mr. Truman thanked Johnston for building ESA—the government's chief agency in the fight against inflation—into an "effective and going concern to cope with the problems that lie ahead."

Successor Is Sought

Johnston wrote that as a private citizen he would "continue to do everything within my power to promote a national policy to prevent inflation. No military defense can be any stronger than the economy which sustains it."

Johnston's departure sped up efforts that were already underway to find a successor. Seven or eight persons have been approached, it was learned here, but the wage-price-rent policy job has found no takers.

Some administration advisers were said to have emphasized that Mr. Truman should appoint an ESA administrator who has the confidence of organized labor.

These advisors contend that wages will be the major stabilization problem in the next six months instead of prices. Major unions—notably CIO steelworkers—are entering contract talks with demands which would fracture the wage ceiling.

Wilson Given Tough Task

Some officials have voiced the opinion privately that the government will be forced to give ground on wage increases to avert defense-crippling strikes in steel, coal or other essential industries.

Substantial wage boosts in those basic areas would mean new price ceiling rises throughout industry, thereby heightening inflationary dangers.

The task of finding a man to cope with these headaches has been handed to Charles E. Wilson, director of the Office of Defense Mobilization. His efforts so far have been concentrated mainly on persons well known in industry or finance.

U. S. Stands Firm Against Using Atomic Weapons

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The United States government, according to all information available here, is standing firm against using atomic weapons in Korea.

This is true at the moment despite the successful development of smaller a-bombs for use against troops in the field and despite a new flurry of proposals that atomic weapons be employed.

Indications are that it may not necessarily remain the American policy indefinitely. If the present truce talks end in failure, responsible authorities here agree that President Truman and his diplomatic and military advisors will have to reconsider the strategy followed in Korea so far.

The question of using atomic weapons in Korea flared up overnight following a report from 8th army headquarters in Korea that 5,500 American prisoners of war had been slaughtered by North Korean and Chinese Communists.

Members of Congress and others declared there clearly was a need for using atomic weapons and a right to use them against a foe guilty of such "barbarism".

In Stratford, Conn., Bernard Baruch, elder statesman and sometime advisor of presidents, was asked whether he thought such weapons should be employed. He said he believed weapons have been perfected for use against armies rather than cities and added, "I saw that the longer we delay action of a definite and decisive nature, the worse off we are going to be."

Overcrowding Blamed For Negro College Riot

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 15 (AP) —Release of "pent-up" energy in an over-crowded dormitory was suggested today as a possible cause of rioting by women students at the Alabama State College for Negroes.

Dormitory halls were littered with broken bottles and several rooms flooded with water early this morning. No one was reported injured and police who investigated made no arrests.

Dr. H. C. Trenholm, president of the school, withheld an official report pending an investigation.

Truman Names Board To Probe Railroad Dispute

Danger Of Any Strike Averted For 60 Days

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP) — President Truman named a three-man board today to investigate a dispute in which 17 big railway unions are asking for union shop clauses in their contracts.

Under such clauses all employes must join the union and remain in good standing to hold their jobs. This arrangement was made possible for railway unions in legislation Congress passed last January.

The 17 unions involved here are the non-operating brotherhoods—whose members are not directly concerned in operating trains. The 17 sought to bargain for the union shop on a nationwide basis this year, but the railroads bucked, saying it was something to be negotiated by each line separately.

The dispute has dragged on and in announcing the formation of an emergency board today, Mr. Truman said at Key West, Fla., that the quarrel constituted a threat to essential transportation.

David L. Cole, Paterson, N. J., a labor attorney and veteran of service on other emergency boards, will be the chairman. Other members are George E. M. Osborn, law professor at Stanford University, and Aaron Horvitz, New York labor specialist.

Appointment of the board, to check on the facts and submit recommendations, automatically heads off the danger of any strike for 60 days.

Farmer Goes To Chair With Prayer On Lips

COUMBUS, O., Nov. 15 (AP)—Max Amerman walked to his death tonight in Ohio Penitentiary's electric chair with a prayer on his lips.

The 27-year-old Medina County farmer, convicted of plotting the murder of a man whose wife he coveted, prayed inaudibly as a minister repeated the 23rd Psalm, the Lord's Prayer and two prayers of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

He was convicted of persuading Jerry Killinger, 18, to ambush and shoot Harold Mast, 23-year-old Medina County famer, so Amerman could continue an affair with Mast's Norwegian war bride, Randi, 24.

Centreville Banker Dies

CENTREVILLE, Md., Nov. 15 (AP) —William R. Wilson, 83, president of the Centreville National Bank since 1921 and a former state senator, died at Easton Memorial Hospital today after an illness of 10 days.

Car Price Hikes Likely As Steel Slash Ordered

Copper, Aluminum For Many Items Cut

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The government cut still deeper tonight in the available supply of metal for non-defense products, including the steel plate auto makers had planned to use in turning out 930,000 cars in the first quarter of 1952.

The auto steel move could mean an ultimate rise in price ceilings on cars and trucks.

The National Production Authority served notice that the auto-truck industry will be allotted only 60 per cent of the steel plate needed to meet scheduled production of 930,000 cars and 24,000 trucks during January, February and March.

May Use "Conversion Steel"

NPA Administrator Manly Fleischmann asked the industry to make up the shortage by using a more expensive but more available form of steel, called "conversion steel."

Fleischmann told a meeting of manufacturers that if they do so, he will ask price control officials to recognize the boost in costs by granting a ceiling price increase for cars and trucks.

"Conversion steel" is metal which is purchased in unfinished condition and turned over to another steel mill for fabricating into finished form.

In another important development, the NPA restricted makers of "less essential" consumer goods to 10 per cent of the amount of copper and 20 per cent of the amount of aluminum they used before Korea. This restriction is to become effective January 1 and hits makers of a variety of things ranging from table lamps to toys.

Some Companies May Fold

The order admittedly may put some companies out of business. NPA announced a program designed to "minimize the casualties."

In other home front developments:

1. Price control officials said ceilings may have to be placed on white potatoes if prices continue to rise. The national average price has gone up from $1.23 a bushel on Sept. 15 to $1.39 on Oct. 15.

2. The Office of Price Stabilization decreed a reduction of six per cent in ceiling prices for most used cars, effective Dec. 20. Also, beginning with the new year, ceiling prices will be lowered two per cent every three months to allow for depreciation.

2 Children, Heroic Father Die In Fire

HEBER, Utah, Nov. 15 (AP) — A father saved two children from flames of their incinerator-like home today and then perished in an attempt to rescue two others.

Irving Sessions, the father, dashed into his blazing metal-sheathed house, rolled a baby to safety down fire-swept stairs and carried another child out of the house. He died in a final rescue attempt.

The charred bodies of Sessions, Judith Ann, 5, and Steven, 2, were found on the second floor.

Singer-Evangelist To Run For President

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—A cowboy singer-evangelist slipped in today as a darkhorse candidate and became the Prohibition Party's nominee for president. He is Stuart Hamblen of Arcadia, Calif.

He won on the first ballot defeating Dr. Enoch Arden Hotwick, Greenville, Ill, 74 to 41.

Dr. Hotwick, who was considered the leading candidate for top place on the ticket, was then chosen unanimously as the vice presidential nominee.

Agent Buried In Wreckage As Train Demolishes Depot

NAHUNTA, Ga., Nov. 15 (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad's Boston to Miami "Havana Special" sideswiped a freight train at nearby Hortense Crossing tonight, killing one engineer and burying a station agent in the wreckage.

Nurse Eunice Lee said A. H. Byington, engineer of the passenger train, was dead on arrival at the ACL Hospital at Waycross, Ga. She said 13 others were injured, some seriously.

Editor Carl Broome of the Brantley County Enterprise said James Strickland, 24, Hortense station agent, was buried in the wreckage when the passenger train's two Diesel units and the first six cars turned over and demolished the small depot.

Broome said the agent tried vainly to flag the "Havana Special" when he saw it bearing down on the freight, which was backing onto a siding. He said rescue workers are still searching the debris for Strickland.

Miss Lee said a two-year-old girl was among the injured

Truman Pledges 'Fair Deal' Demo Platform In 1952

President Rejects Big 4 Meeting Idea

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 15 (AP) — President Truman guaranteed today the Democrats will have a "Fair Deal" platform in 1952 and brushed aside suggestions of a "Big Four" conference on world peace.

And he gave ground for renewed political speculation by returning a flat no comment to a question whether he has any intention of supporting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The President told a news conference that domestic politics was not even mentioned at his recent Washington conference with Eisenhower.

Condemns Red Atrocities

Correspondents were divided as to the possible significance of the Eisenhower question, but Mr. Truman left no doubt he will demand that the party go down the line for civil rights, labor and other controversial domestic legislation which has met a cool reception in Congress.

The president also:

1. Condemned as horrible and the most uncivilized thing that has happened in the last century the reported slayings by Chinese and North Korean Reds of American and other war prisoners in Korea. He said he has not had an official report on it as yet, however.

Hopes Russia Changes Mind

2. Expressed hope of ultimate acceptance by Russia of a U. S.-sponsored proposal for reduction of armies and arms, including atomic weapons, under a system of constant inspection.

3. Said he intends to get to the bottom of any malfeasance or misconduct by government employes, but defended the vast majority of federal workers as honorable.

Second Phase Of Atom Tests To Start Today

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 15 (AP) — Weather permitting, the second phase of the Atomic Energy Commission's fall series of nuclear tests will get under way tomorrow.

Sen. Ralph E. Flanders (R-Vt.) and Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC), members of congressional armed services committees, were here for the second phase opening, which is not expected to be as spectacular as the first group of five atomic "shots," from Oct. 22 to Nov. 5.

The second phase will be devoted entirely to weapons effects tests on various structures and animals, the AEC has said.

Hospital For Warren

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Nov. 15 (AP) —Gov. Earl Warren's doctor ordered him to a hospital today for a check-up on an intestinal disturbance that has troubled him for three weeks.

He will go to the University of California Hospital in San Francisco in the morning.

Wreckage Of U. S. Plane Found; All 36 Aboard Killed

CHAMBON-SUR-LAC, France, Nov. 15 (AP)—A U. S. Air Force Flying Boxcar, lost two days ago in swirling snow, rain and fog, was found crashed and burned today on the snow-mantled Mont Dore range. All the 36 Americans aboard were killed.

The C-82 plane apparently had missed by only about 50 feet a defile leading to a 5,000-foot-high plateau, where an emergency landing might have been made.

U. S. Air Force headquarters in Germany said the names of the dead will be announced Saturday, after the customary notice is given to next of kin.

Sen. Taft Tops "Ike" In House Republican Poll

[By The Associated Press]

President Truman said yesterday his "Fair Deal" program—fighting words to many in the southern wing of the party—will be a part of the 1952 Democratic Party platform no matter who runs.

This bit of Democratic political news came from Key West, Fla., while in Washington a poll of House Republicans showed Sen. Robert A. Taft leading Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a test of strength for the Republican presidential nomination.

The poll by Rep. Cole (R-NY) brought replies from 161 of the 196 House Republicans. Cole said 71 named Taft as their first choice, 54 selected Eisenhower, 13 were for Sen. Dirksen of Illinois, 12 for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, five for Gov. Earl Warren of California, and a handful went to scattered choices.

Taft and Warren are the only announced candidates, and Warren's announcement came after the poll was completed.

Much of President Truman's weekly news conference at "the Little White House" in Florida was devoted to political give and take.

The President refused again to shed any light on his own plans about running or not running in 1952. He likewise refused to comment on whether he had any intention of supporting Eisenhower for the Democratic nomination.

Mr. Truman had a pleasant word for Republican Aspirant Warren—he said he is a fine man. He also said he sticks by his old opinion that Warren was a Democrat and didn't know it.

"Ike"-For-President Forces Led By Lodge

ABILENE, Kas., Nov. 15 (AP)—Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., (R-Mass) has accepted an invitation to become national director of the Eisenhower-for-president movement.

The acceptance was announced today by Henry B. Jameson, Abilene newspaperman who is chairman of the Kansas volunteer Eisenhower forces which began booming the general as a candidate for Republican presidential nomination.

Paradoxial Stand Taken By China Reds

Deny They Demand Immediate Truce

MUNSAN, Korea, Friday, Nov. 16 (AP)—Communist negotiators denied Thursday they sought a cease-fire in Korea before the formal signing of an armistice, but continued to insist that the United Nations agree to a provisional stop-shooting line now.

The apparently paradoxical Communist stand was pointed up sharply in a United Nations communique Thursday night. It reported no progress Thursday in a three-hour 20-minute subcommittee session at Panmunjom.

Subcommittee Meets Again

The subcommittee met for the 23rd meeting at Panmunjom at 11 a. m., today (9 p. m., Thursday, E.S.T.)

"We're just about where we've always been," reported an acting U. N. spokesman, Lt. Col. Howard S. Levie. "We're still talking."

There was another indication affairs were going poorly at Panmunjom.

Reds Report U. N. Attacks

The Red radio also asserted "waves" of enemy troops attacked Red positions southwest of Panmunjom. It emphasized that Chinese Communist "volunteers" were determined to defend Kaesong, former conference city just below the 38th parallel and 34 air miles northwest of Seoul.

In the past the Reds have frequently fallen back on such charges when conference talks were stalemated.

Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, chief of the U. N. subcommittee of two, called on the Communists to drop their insistence on a provisional buffer line across Korea.

"With this eliminated," said Hodes, "our proposals would be to (all) intents and purposes identical. I propose that we formulate a proposal on this basis."

The Communists then denied they even wanted a cease-fire prior to a formal agreement.

Mud Bogs Down War

SEOUL, Korea, Friday, Nov. 16 (AP) — Thick mud bogged down the war Thursday as an inch of cold rain swept the Korean battlefront.

The day-long downpour sharply limited all ground action and kept most planes at their bases.

The heaviest fight was northwest of Yanggu on the eastern front.

There, two Red platoons, attacking in darkness early Thursday hurled American troops off an advance position, said the Eighth Army evening communique.

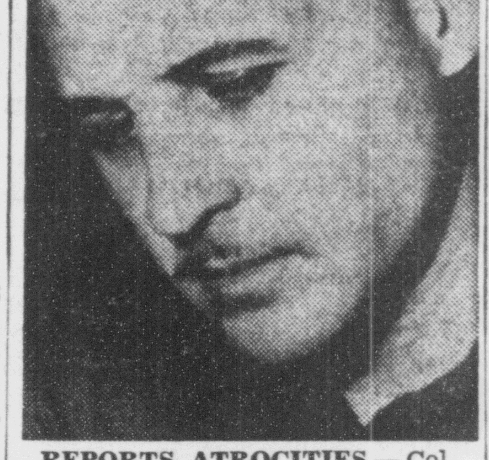
The doughboys quickly regrouped, charged back up the slippery slopes and regained the lost position.

Other Nations' Plane Needs Come First

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Key Defense officials disclosed today that U. S. planes are being sent to other countries under the foreign military aid program before the requirements of the U. S. Air Force are met.

These officials also said that production of new warplanes is substantially behind schedule because the Air Force has found it takes up to 10 months longer than expected to make them.

Defense Department authorities gave no figures today on how many planes are being sent to this country's allies, what kind of planes are goin goverseas, or what countries are getting the planes.



REPORTS ATROCITIES — Col. James M. Hanley (above), chief of the Far East Command's war crimes section, said in an interview at Pusan, Korea, that Communists had slaughtered some 5,500 American prisoners of war. Hanley said he divulged the figures because he thought American soldiers at the front ought to know what they are up against. (AP Wirephoto).

Substantial Pay Hike To Be Asked By Steelworkers

CIO Union Appears Ready To Buck WSB

ATLANTIC CITY, N. C., Nov. 15 (AP) — The wage-policy committee of the CIO's steelworkers union decided today to press the steel industry for a substantial pay raise, a guaranteed annual wage and 20 other concessions.

And it appeared that the million-man union was ready to buck the Wage Stabilization Board in an effort to ease wage controls and get more money.

Philip Murray, chief of both the CIO and the steelworkers, said he hoped negotiations could start within a few weeks.

5 Cents An Hour Not Enough

While the committee agreed on a request for a substantial wage increase, Murray declined to put a figure on it. He said this was a "negotiable factor."

However, he did say that five cents an hour would not be enough to meet the demand. Under the wage stabilization formula, this amount is all union members are entitled to, because they got a raise last fall.

Meanwhile, in Cincinnati, President Benjamin F. Fairless of the U. S. Steel Corporation said in a prepared address tonight that the size of a pay raise "will apparently have to be decided finally in Washington."

Union Shop To Be Demanded

He said he thought any further steel wage increases now "will only result in an increase in the cost of living."

Besides asking for a substantial wage increase Murray's 170-man policy committee for the big steel union voted to insist on a union shop and productivity benefits.

In addition it wants improved vacations, severance pay provisions, premium pay for Saturday and Sunday work, seniority and quicker handling of grievances.

Fog Puts "Mac" Behind Schedule

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 15 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur visited Portland today, but he spent longer in the air over the city than he did on the ground.

Thick fog over the Portland airport delayed the general's takeoff from Seattle, then kept his plane circling two hours and 40 minutes over the airport here.

Once aground, the general was greeted by Mayor Dorothy McCullough Lee, who had waited five hours and 20 minutes at the airport. Then he was escorted through Portland streets for a brief call at a veterans' hospital.

Four Scientists, Swedish Author Win Nobel Prizes

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 15 (AP)—Four scientists who are architects of the atomic age and an author whose best seller novel is laid in the time of Christ won 1951 Nobel prizes today.

The chemistry prize was shared by two Americans—Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg and Dr. Edward M. McMillan, both of the University of California at Berkeley. They are co-discoverers of plutonium, a substance that made it easier and cheaper to produce atomic bombs. McMillan's work made it possible to create cosmic rays in the laboratory.

A Briton and an Irishman shared the prize for physics. They are Sir John Cockcroft, director of Britain's "atomic city" at Harwell, and Prof. E. T. S. Walton of Dublin's Trinity College. They won the prize for their work as a team in 1932, when their experiments in splitting atomic nuclei with artificially propelled bullets helped pave the way for the present status of atomic affairs.

Par Lagerkvist, a Swedish author whose novel "Barabbas" is high on best seller lists in the United States won the library prize. He is a poet, essayist and philosopher as well as novelist.

Gen. Ridgway Directs Aide To Investigate

Story Is Horrible, Truman Declares

[By The Associated Press]

A full investigation into the story that Communist captors have wantonly murdered 5,500 American prisoners of war was ordered today by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

Earlier, President Truman joined other leaders in branding the reported slaughter as horrible. In a news conference yesterday he called it the most uncivilized thing that has happened in the last century if the report is true.

The story came Wednesday at a news conference held in Pusan, Korea, by Col. James M. Hanley, chief of the judge advocate's section of Eighth Army.

The release of the report caught the Pentagon high command by surprise, and the State Department as well. It brought an outpouring of anxious calls to Washington from families of the 11,000 American troops officially listed as captured or missing in action.

Ridgway Aide To See Hanley

Ridgway was not at his Eighth Army headquarters in Tokyo at the time Hanley gave out his report, which the colonel described as something the front line Allied fighters ought to know about.

Today, however, the supreme Allied commander ordered his press information officer, Col. Patrick Welch, to proceed to Pusan and interview Col. Hanley and Col. Kenneth L. Booth, the Eighth Army public information officer. Hanley had said the Eighth Army passed on the story.

Ridgway's headquarters said there would be no official comment until the investigation was completed.

The President spoke out at his news conference at Key West, Fla., as shock waves of revulsion and anger spread across the nation and echoed in foreign capitals.

Some Congress members called for swift atomic revenge against the Chinese Reds; others demanded to know why the story of the atrocity killings was kept secret so long.

Expressions of indignation and horror came from delegates to the United Nations General Assembly in Paris, coupled with demands for U. N. counter action.

Hanley Says Story Cleared

At his Florida vacation spot, Mr. Truman refused to say whether the reported murders would hasten the day when the a-bomb or other atomic weapons might be unleashed against the enemy in Korea.

Tokyo dispatches said many of the massacres had been reported months ago. It was the cumulative total disclosed by Col. Hanley that was staggering.

Hanley told Associated Press Correspondent Bill Shinn in an exclusive interview that the story of the "wanton murder" of U. S. prisoners "should have been put out a long time ago." American soldiers at the front, he said, ought to know what they are up against.

Hanley said he asked U. N. headquarters for permission to release the story last September. He said he made a business trip to Washington, and was notified on his return to the war front early this month that the story could be made public.

Yugoslavia Asks U.N. To Intervene

PARIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—Yugoslavia asked the United Nations today to order off Soviet satellite troops stationed along her borders and restore calm to the Balkans.

Evard Kardelj, Yugoslav foreign minister, told the U. N. Assembly that Hungary, Romina and Bulgaria are keeping 25 divisions—almost half their total of 53 divisions—in frontier positions menacing his independent Communist nation.

Kardelj also came out for a meeting of the chiefs of state of the great powers during the Assembly, saying this would be a positive step for peace.

It became known as the general debate continued that Secretary General Trygve Lie planned to wind up the talkfest with an appeal for representatives of France, Britain, the United States and Russia to meet during the Assembly and seek an agreement. Lie may speak tomorrow, or perhaps Saturday.

Kardelj said the Cominform neighbors are constantly strengthening their forces on Yugoslavia's borders. The divisions have increased from 14 to 25 in two years, he said. He added that he was not even counting Soviet armed forces stationed in those countries.

HEBER, Utah, Nov. 15 (AP) — A father saved two children from flames of their incinerator-like home today and then perished in an attempt to rescue two others.

Irving Sessions, the father, dashed into his blazing metal-sheathed house, rolled a baby to safety down fire-swept stairs and carried another child out of the house. He died in a final rescue attempt.

The charred bodies of Sessions, Judith Ann, 5, and Steven, 2, were found on the second floor.

Singer-Evangelist To Run For President

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—A cowboy singer-evangelist slipped in today as a darkhorse candidate and became the Prohibition Party's nominee for president. He is Stuart Hamblen of Arcadia, Calif.

He won on the first ballot defeating Dr. Enoch Arden Hotwick, Greenville, Ill, 74 to 41.

Dr. Hotwick, who was considered the leading candidate for top place on the ticket, was then chosen unanimously as the vice presidential nominee.

Agent Buried In Wreckage As Train Demolishes Depot

NAHUNTA, Ga., Nov. 15 (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad's Boston to Miami "Havana Special" sideswiped a freight train at nearby Hortense Crossing tonight, killing one engineer and burying a station agent in the wreckage.

Nurse Eunice Lee said A. H. Byington, engineer of the passenger train, was dead on arrival at the ACL Hospital at Waycross, Ga. She said 13 others were injured, some seriously.

Editor Carl Broome of the Brantley County Enterprise said James Strickland, 24, Hortense station agent, was buried in the wreckage when the passenger train's two Diesel units and the first six cars turned over and demolished the small depot.

Broome said the agent tried vainly to flag the "Havana Special" when he saw it bearing down on the freight, which was backing onto a siding. He said rescue workers are still searching the debris for Strickland.

Miss Lee said a two-year-old girl was among the injured

President Rejects Big 4 Meeting Idea

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 15 (AP) — President Truman guaranteed today the Democrats will have a "Fair Deal" platform in 1952 and brushed aside suggestions of a "Big Four" conference on world peace.

And he gave ground for renewed political speculation by returning a flat no comment to a question whether he has any intention of supporting Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The President told a news conference that domestic politics was not even mentioned at his recent Washington conference with Eisenhower.

Condemns Red Atrocities

Correspondents were divided as to the possible significance of the Eisenhower question, but Mr. Truman left no doubt he will demand that the party go down the line for civil rights, labor and other controversial domestic legislation which has met a cool reception in Congress.

The president also:

1. Condemned as horrible and the most uncivilized thing that has happened in the last century the reported slayings by Chinese and North Korean Reds of American and other war prisoners in Korea. He said he has not had an official report on it as yet, however.

Hopes Russia Changes Mind

2. Expressed hope of ultimate acceptance by Russia of a U. S.-sponsored proposal for reduction of armies and arms, including atomic weapons, under a system of constant inspection.

3. Said he intends to get to the bottom of any malfeasance or misconduct by government employes, but defended the vast majority of federal workers as honorable.

Second Phase Of Atom Tests To Start Today

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Nov. 15 (AP) — Weather permitting, the second phase of the Atomic Energy Commission's fall series of nuclear tests will get under way tomorrow.

Sen. Ralph E. Flanders (R-Vt.) and Rep. L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC), members of congressional armed services committees, were here for the second phase opening, which is not expected to be as spectacular as the first group of five atomic "shots," from Oct. 22 to Nov. 5.

The second phase will be devoted entirely to weapons effects tests on various structures and animals, the AEC has said.

Hospital For Warren

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Nov. 15 (AP)—Gov. Earl Warren's doctor ordered him to a hospital today for a check-up on an intestinal disturbance that has troubled him for three weeks.

He will go to the University of California Hospital in San Francisco in the morning.

Wreckage Of U. S. Plane Found; All 36 Aboard Killed

CHAMBON-SUR-LAC, France, Nov. 15 (AP)—A U. S. Air Force Flying Boxcar, lost two days ago in swirling snow, rain and fog, was found crashed and burned today on the snow-mantled Mont Dore range. All the 36 Americans aboard were killed.

The C-82 plane apparently had missed by only about 50 feet a defile leading to a 5,000-foot-high plateau, where an emergency landing might have been made.

U. S. Air Force headquarters in Germany said the names of the dead will be announced Saturday, after the customary notice is given to next of kin.

Sen. Taft Tops "Ike" In House Republican Poll

[By The Associated Press]

President Truman said yesterday his "Fair Deal" program—fighting words to many in the southern wing of the party—will be a part of the 1952 Democratic Party platform no matter who runs.

This bit of Democratic political news came from Key West, Fla., while in Washington a poll of House Republicans showed Sen. Robert A. Taft leading Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in a test of strength for the Republican presidential nomination.

The poll by Rep. Cole (R-NY) brought replies from 161 of the 196 House Republicans. Cole said 71 named Taft as their first choice, 54 selected Eisenhower, 13 were for Sen. Dirksen of Illinois, 12 for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, five for Gov. Earl Warren of California, and a handful went to scattered choices.

Taft and Warren are the only announced candidates, and Warren's announcement came after the poll was completed.

Much of President Truman's weekly news conference at "the Little White House" in Florida was devoted to political give and take.

The President refused again to shed any light on his own plans about running or not running in 1952. He likewise refused to comment on whether he had any intention of supporting Eisenhower for the Democratic nomination.

Mr. Truman had a pleasant word for Republican Aspirant Warren—he said he is a fine man. He also said he sticks by his old opinion that Warren was a Democrat and didn't know it.

"Ike"-For-President Forces Led By Lodge

ABILENE, Kas., Nov. 15 (AP)—Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., (R-Mass) has accepted an invitation to become national director of the Eisenhower-for-president movement.

The acceptance was announced today by Henry B. Jameson, Abilene newspaperman who is chairman of the Kansas volunteer Eisenhower forces which began booming the general as a candidate for Republican presidential nomination.

Paradoxial Stand Taken By China Reds

Deny They Demand Immediate Truce

MUNSAN, Korea, Friday, Nov. 16 (AP)—Communist negotiators denied Thursday they sought a cease-fire in Korea before the formal signing of an armistice, but continued to insist that the United Nations agree to a provisional stop-shooting line now.

The apparently paradoxical Communist stand was pointed up sharply in a United Nations communique Thursday night. It reported no progress Thursday in a three-hour 20-minute subcommittee session at Panmunjom.

Subcommittee Meets Again

The subcommittee met for the 23rd meeting at Panmunjom at 11 a. m., today (9 p. m., Thursday, E.S.T.)

"We're just about where we've always been," reported an acting U. N. spokesman, Lt. Col. Howard S. Levie. "We're still talking."

There was another indication affairs were going poorly at Panmunjom.

Reds Report U. N. Attacks

The Red radio also asserted "waves" of enemy troops attacked Red positions southwest of Panmunjom. It emphasized that Chinese Communist "volunteers" were determined to defend Kaesong, former conference city just below the 38th parallel and 34 air miles northwest of Seoul.

In the past the Reds have frequently fallen back on such charges when conference talks were stalemated.

Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hodes, chief of the U. N. subcommittee of two, called on the Communists to drop their insistence on a provisional buffer line across Korea.

"With this eliminated," said Hodes, "our proposals would be to (all) intents and purposes identical. I propose that we formulate a proposal on this basis."

Mud Bogs Down War

SEOUL, Korea, Friday, Nov. 16 (AP) — Thick mud bogged down the war Thursday as an inch of cold rain swept the Korean battlefront.

The day-long downpour sharply limited all ground action and kept most planes at their bases.

The heaviest fight was northwest of Yanggu on the eastern front.

There, two Red platoons, attacking in darkness early Thursday hurled American troops off an advance position, said the Eighth Army evening communique.

The doughboys quickly regrouped, charged back up the slippery slopes and regained the lost position.

Other Nations' Plane Needs Come First

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Key Defense officials disclosed today that U. S. planes are being sent to other countries under the foreign military aid program before the requirements of the U. S. Air Force are met.

These officials also said that production of new warplanes is substantially behind schedule because the Air Force has found it takes up to 10 months longer than expected to make them.

Defense Department authorities gave no figures today on how many planes are being sent to this country's allies, what kind of planes are goin goverseas, or what countries are getting the planes.

REPORTS ATROCITIES — Col. James M. Hanley (above), chief of the Far East Command's war crimes section, said in an interview at Pusan, Korea, that Communists had slaughtered some 5,500 American prisoners of war. Hanley said he divulged the figures because he thought American soldiers at the front ought to know what they are up against. (AP Wirephoto).

Substantial Pay Hike To Be Asked By Steelworkers

CIO Union Appears Ready To Buck WSB

ATLANTIC CITY, N. C., Nov. 15 (AP) — The wage-policy committee of the CIO's steelworkers union decided today to press the steel industry for a substantial pay raise, a guaranteed annual wage and 20 other concessions.

And it appeared that the million-man union was ready to buck the Wage Stabilization Board in an effort to ease wage controls and get more money.

Philip Murray, chief of both the CIO and the steelworkers, said he hoped negotiations could start within a few weeks.

5 Cents An Hour Not Enough

While the committee agreed on a request for a substantial wage increase, Murray declined to put a figure on it. He said this was a "negotiable factor."

However, he did say that five cents an hour would not be enough to meet the demand. Under the wage stabilization formula, this amount is all union members are entitled to, because they got a raise last fall.

Meanwhile, in Cincinnati, President Benjamin F. Fairless of the U. S. Steel Corporation said in a prepared address tonight that the size of a pay raise "will apparently have to be decided finally in Washington."

Union Shop To Be Demanded

He said he thought any further steel wage increases now "will only result in an increase in the cost of living."

Besides asking for a substantial wage increase Murray's 170-man policy committee for the big steel union voted to insist on a union shop and productivity benefits.

In addition it wants improved vacations, severance pay provisions, premium pay for Saturday and Sunday work, seniority and quicker handling of grievances.

Fog Puts "Mac" Behind Schedule

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 15 (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur visited Portland today, but he spent longer in the air over the city than he did on the ground.

Thick fog over the Portland airport delayed the general's takeoff from Seattle, then kept his plane circling two hours and 40 minutes over the airport here.

Once aground, the general was greeted by Mayor Dorothy McCullough Lee, who had waited five hours and 20 minutes at the airport. Then he was escorted through Portland streets for a brief call at a veterans' hospital.

Gen. Ridgway Directs Aide To Investigate

Story Is Horrible, Truman Declares

[By The Associated Press]

A full investigation into the story that Communist captors have wantonly murdered 5,500 American prisoners of war was ordered today by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway.

Earlier, President Truman joined other leaders in branding the reported slaughter as horrible. In a news conference yesterday he called it the most uncivilized thing that has happened in the last century if the report is true.

The story came Wednesday at a news conference held in Pusan, Korea, by Col. James M. Hanley, chief of the judge advocate's section of Eighth Army.

The release of the report caught the Pentagon high command by surprise, and the State Department as well. It brought an outpouring of anxious calls to Washington from families of the 11,000 American troops officially listed as captured or missing in action.

Ridgway Aide To See Hanley

Ridgway was not at his Eighth Army headquarters in Tokyo at the time Hanley gave out his report, which the colonel described as something the front line Allied fighters ought to know about.

Today, however, the supreme Allied commander ordered his press information officer, Col. Patrick Welch, to proceed to Pusan and interview Col. Hanley and Col. Kenneth L. Booth, the Eighth Army public information officer. Hanley had said the Eighth Army passed on the story.

Ridgway's headquarters said there would be no official comment until the investigation was completed.

The President spoke out at his news conference at Key West, Fla., as shock waves of revulsion and anger spread across the nation and echoed in foreign capitals.

Some Congress members called for swift atomic revenge against the Chinese Reds; others demanded to know why the story of the atrocity killings was kept secret so long.

Expressions of indignation and horror came from delegates to the United Nations General Assembly in Paris, coupled with demands for U. N. counter action.

Hanley Says Story Cleared

At his Florida vacation spot, Mr. Truman refused to say whether the reported murders would hasten the day when the a-bomb or other atomic weapons might be unleashed against the enemy in Korea.

Tokyo dispatches said many of the massacres had been reported months ago. It was the cumulative total disclosed by Col. Hanley that was staggering.

Hanley told Associated Press Correspondent Bill Shinn in an exclusive interview that the story of the "wanton murder" of U. S. prisoners "should have been put out a long time ago." American soldiers at the front, he said, ought to know what they are up against.

Hanley said he asked U. N. headquarters for permission to release the story last September. He said he made a business trip to Washington, and was notified on his return to the war front early this month that the story could be made public.

Yugoslavia Asks U.N. To Intervene

PARIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—Yugoslavia asked the United Nations today to order off Soviet satellite troops stationed along her borders and restore calm to the Balkans.

Evard Kardelj, Yugoslav foreign minister, told the U. N. Assembly that Hungary, Romina and Bulgaria are keeping 25 divisions—almost half their total of 53 divisions—in frontier positions menacing his independent Communist nation.

Kardelj also came out for a meeting of the chiefs of state of the great powers during the Assembly, saying this would be a positive step for peace.

It became known as the general debate continued that Secretary General Trygve Lie planned to wind up the talkfest with an appeal for representatives of France, Britain, the United States and Russia to meet during the Assembly and seek an agreement. Lie may speak tomorrow, or perhaps Saturday.

Kardelj said the Cominform neighbors are constantly strengthening their forces on Yugoslavia's borders. The divisions have increased from 14 to 25 in two years, he said. He added that he was not even counting Soviet armed forces stationed in those countries.

Four Scientists, Swedish Author Win Nobel Prizes

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 15 (AP)—Four scientists who are architects of the atomic age and an author whose best seller novel is laid in the time of Christ won 1951 Nobel prizes today.

The chemistry prize was shared by two Americans—Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg and Dr. Edward M. McMillan, both of the University of California at Berkeley. They are co-discoverers of plutonium, a substance that made it easier and cheaper to produce atomic bombs. McMillan's work made it possible to create cosmic rays in the laboratory.

A Briton and an Irishman shared the prize for physics. They are Sir John Cockcroft, director of Britain's "atomic city" at Harwell, and Prof. E. T. S. Walton of Dublin's Trinity College. They won the prize for their work as a team in 1932, when their experiments in splitting atomic nuclei with artificially propelled bullets helped pave the way for the present status of atomic affairs.

Par Lagerkvist, a Swedish author whose novel "Barabbas" is high on best seller lists in the United States won the library prize. He is a poet, essayist and philosopher as well as novelist.

New Jersey Newspaper Suspends Publication Due To Soaring Costs

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 15 (INS)—The Jersey Observer of Hoboken announced today that it will suspend publication after its final issue next Saturday.

The newspaper, with a listed circulation of 44,652, has had a record of uninterrupted daily publication for 59 years.

The rising costs of putting out a newspaper was given as the reason for the suspension.

A statement signed by Fred A. Seide, publisher, and Elizabeth M. Fagan, co-publisher by the newspaper today in which it was stated:

"We regret this end of a 59-year history of community service. This end has been dictated by a crushing combination of irresistable economic factors."

Explaining the factors involved the statement said:

"Since 1939, this newspaper has been adjusting itself to an unrelenting period of new cost burdens and a growing competitive invasion of our market by other newspapers, metropolitan as well as local.

"We have successfully met the intensified competition, but only by assuming the cost of additional editorial content and news coverage.

"This intense competition, due to our disadvantageous location between New York and a number of rival local shopping centers has multiplied for us the heavy burdens suffered by all newspapers in meeting rising material and labor costs.

"Since 1939, the cost of our newsprint has risen from $48 a ton to the present price of $116 a ton with further price rises almost certain to come.

"In the same period, payrolls have risen $500,000, with other costs rising proportionally. To meet this enormous rise in costs, we have raised our subscription and advertising rates to a point where further increases would be unjustly burdensome.

"Since further rises in our costs are threatened, and since our competitive problem continues to impose additional burdens, we face a road that can no longer be travelled."

The statement disclosed that the Jersey Observer's plant, including all printing machinery, will be available for sale during the next month and that bids will be received until December 15, 1951.

"Arturos" Give Up Act After "Queen" Killed

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15 (AP)—The circus act known as "The Great Arturos" won't be seen on the high wire for awhile.

The "queen" of the act, 17-year-old Evy Trostl, died yesterday in a fall from the 60-foot wire on which the troupe performed. More than 7,000 spectators at the Shrine Circus here saw the accident.

Evy's father, 46-year-old Arturo Trostl, collapsed when he was told of her death at Maryland General Hospital yesterday, and flew with the body to the family home in Tampa, Fla., today.

A cousin, Eric Trostl, packed all the act's gear into a trailer today and drove to Tampa.

Rayburn "Insulting," McKeldin Declares

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 15 (AP)—House Speaker Sam Rayburn "insulted" southern governors with his party-loyalty speech at their conference, Gov. McKeldin charged tonight.

The Texas Democrat went to the conference at Hot Springs, Ark., "with all the musty, worn-out bits of demogoguery that he and his gang have been using for years," McKeldin said.

McKeldin walked out of the room as Rayburn attacked any notion among states' rights Democrats to bolt the party if they dislike next year's presidential nominee.

He explained why in a statement issued upon his return from the annual meeting of Dixie governors.

"In my opinion, it was downright discourteous and an insult to the integrity and intelligence of the southern governors," McKeldin said.

McKeldin was the lone Republican at the conference.

Christmas club owners in the country's 529 mutual savings banks will soon receive $181,232,287 for their Yule shopping. And that, says the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, is an all-time record.

In Maryland, 64,074 people saved a total of $4,232,184, or an average of $66.05 per deposit.

Congress Gets "Report Card"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Congress got its final "report card" for the 1951 session today. It showed:

Senators, as usual, worked longer and talked more than members of the House.

A summary published in the Congressional record showed the Senate was in session 996 hours and 46 minutes this year.

It took 8,001 three-column pages of the daily Record to print all the senators had to say on the floor. That figures out to something like 12,000,000 words—or an average of 125,000 words per senator.

The House, which years ago put a limit on its debates, met for only 704 hours and 41 minutes. Its oratory filled a mere 6,051 pages. That adds up to around 9,000,000 words. And, with 435 members in the House compared with the Senate's 96, the average congressman had to confine himself to around 20,700 words.

By coincidence, today's final edition of the 1951 Record contained the Oct. 20 speech in which Sen. Neely (D-W Va) scathingly denounced in about 2,600 words—his fellow legislators for talking too much.

The truck, driven by Beverly Francis Showman, 21, Mt. Jackson, Va., was owned by Goode's Transfer Co., Harrisonburg, Va.

Showman pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving before Justice of the Peace Shirley Hunt and was fined $25 and costs.

Hunt estimated the damages at a minimum of $10,000—$5,000 to the truck and $5,000 to the three structures.

Search Called Off

Former Tax Collector Addicted To Drug

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger said today Lipe Henslee, former internal revenue collector in charge of the Nashville, Tenn., district, will enter a hospital soon for drug addication and other ailments.

Anslinger said Henslee began taking demerol, a habit forming narcotic, several years ago under prescription from his physician after a heart attack.

This treatment continued until last month, Anslinger said, but the narcotics bureau now feels that Henslee should be hospitalized to cure his addiction. Anslinger added that no special blame should be attached to Henslee, because he took the drug for a long period under doctor's orders.

Congress Gets "Report Card"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Congress got its final "report card" for the 1951 session today. It showed:

Senators, as usual, worked longer and talked more than members of the House.

But the House got more legislating done, passing 1,193 measures to the Senate's 1,059.

A summary published in the Congressional record showed the Senate was in session 996 hours and 46 minutes this year.

It took 8,001 three-column pages of the daily Record to print all the senators had to say on the floor. That figures out to something like 12,000,000 words—or an average of 125,000 words per senator.

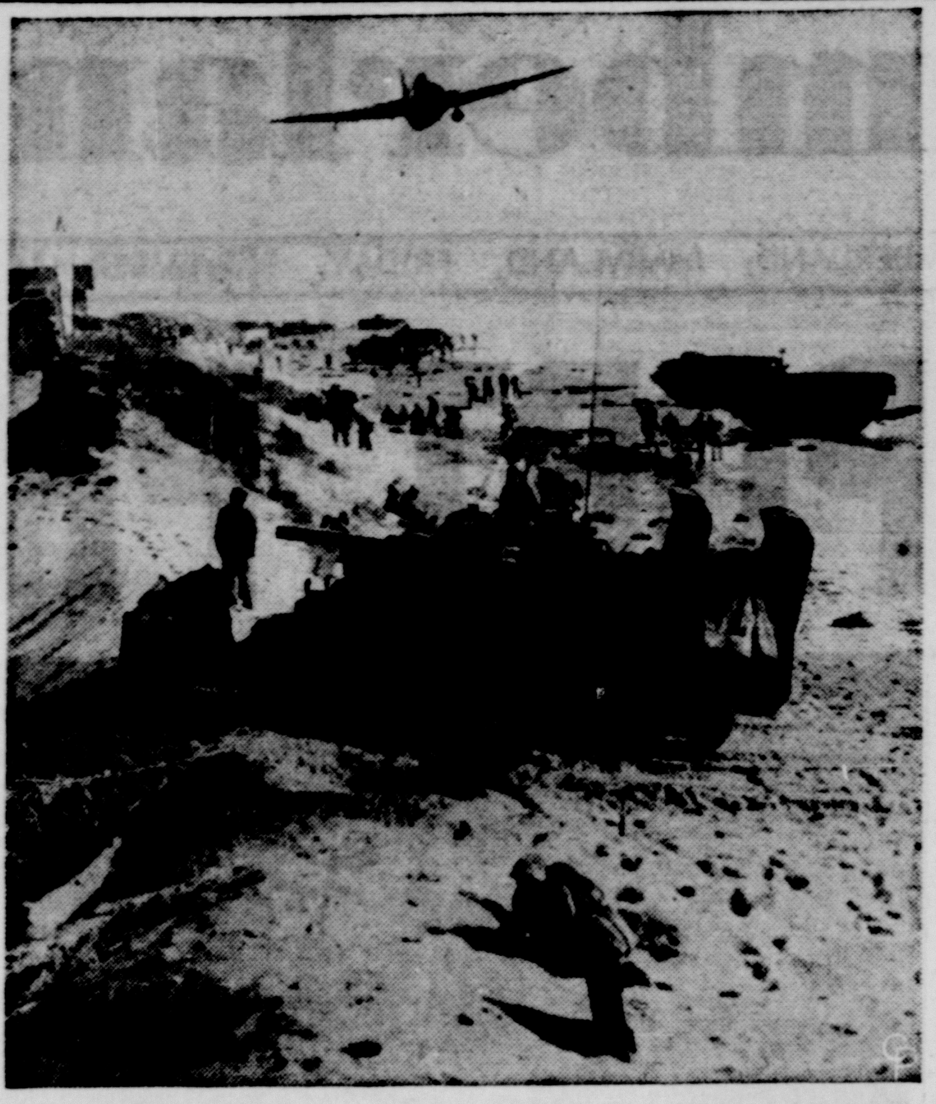
The House, which years ago put a limit on its debates, met for only 704 hours and 41 minutes. Its oratory filled a mere 6,051 pages. That adds up to around 9,000,000 words. And, with 435 members in the House compared with the Senate's 96, the average congressman had to confine himself to around 20,700 words.

By coincidence, today's final edition of the 1951 Record contained the Oct. 20 speech in which Sen. Neely (D-W Va) scathingly denounced in about 2,600 words—his fellow legislators for talking too much.

Lutheran Minister Dies

FREDERICK, Md., Nov. 15 (AP) — The Rev. Reese St. Clair Poffenbarger, pastor of Union Bridge, Keysville and Rocky Ridge Lutheran charge, died last night at the home of a son near Wodsboro.

The minister, who was 71, was widely known in Frederick, Washington and Carroll Counties. He had been ill a short time after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage.



LANDING IN FORCE during operation "Lantflex 52," some 20,000 troops of the U. S. Second Marine Division strike inland at Onslow Beach, N. C., following a sudden assault on the "enemy's" shore. More than 100,000 men, 260 ships and 900 planes are taking part in the exercises, the most extensive staged by the Navy since World War II. A mock "A" bomb exploded over the fleet as the attack began. (International)

Truck Smashes Homes At Charles Town, W. Va.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Nov. 15 (AP)—A big tractor-trailer skidded out of control on a wet turn here and smashed into two houses and a tavern. No one was reported injured.

The truck, driven by Beverly Francis Showman, 21, Mt. Jackson, Va., was owned by Goode's Transfer Co., Harrisonburg, Va.

Showman pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving before Justice of the Peace Shirley Hunt and was fined $25 and costs.

Hunt estimated the damages at a minimum of $10,000—$5,000 to the truck and $5,000 to the three structures.

Search Called Off

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 15 (AP)—The concerted search for the missing Klein brothers has been called off.

The only concrete clue to fate of Kenneth Klein, Jr., 8; David, 6, and Daniel, 4, is two plaid woolen caps taken from the Mississippi River near a dam Tuesday.

Former Tax Collector Addicted To Drug

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (AP)—Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger said today Lipe Henslee, former internal revenue collector in charge of the Nashville, Tenn., district, will enter a hospital soon for drug addication and other ailments.

Anslinger said Henslee began taking demerol, a habit forming narcotic, several years ago under prescription from his physician after a heart attack.

This treatment continued until last month, Anslinger said, but the narcotics bureau now feels that Henslee should be hospitalized to cure his addiction. Anslinger added that no special blame should be attached to Henslee, because he took the drug for a long period under doctor's orders.

British, On Full War Alert, Keep Control Of Suez

BRITISH MIDDLE EAST HEADQUARTERS, Fayid, Canal Zone, Egypt (AP)—Thousands of young British soldiers and veteran regulars are living under wartime conditions in this disputed slice of desert along the Suez waterway.

Many are eating tin rations. Nearly all are on a 24-hour on and 24-hour off duty schedule in ever-present danger of terrorist ambush.

A few short weeks ago these soldiers—many of them fresh from British training camps—were living the monotonous life of a peacetime garrison.

Overnight in mid-October all that changed. King Farouk's government tore up Egypt's treaties with Britain. United Kingdom troops, first garrisoned near Ismailia in 1882, were ordered off Egyptian soil.

London's reply was "no." Lt. Gen. Sir George Erskine, British commander in Egypt, told his troops "we won't be starved out, forced out or knocked out."

Now in desert foxholes, in machinegun pits scooped out of sand dunes, red-eyed, desert-tanned British troops are on guard at every strategic point along the canal zone limits. Others drive or guard convoy trucks rumbling along the highways night and day, from Port Said to Ismailia to Suez. Jet fighters scream overhead on reconnaissance flights.

Senior officers in headquarters at Fayid, Ismailia and Moascar work long hours. Junior officers command important road blocks and strategic canal defense positions.

At one important canal crossing and road block, three Centurion tanks challenge all comers. Ugly Bren guns sweep the canal and highway. Troops search passing cars, buses and trucks. Atop a two-story building a corporal scans the desert across the canal through binoculars.

All up and down the Suez waterway and along main highways and linking roads the scene is the same.

How many troops are deployed is a military secret.

Gen. Erskine's forces increase daily by air and sea. The biggest airlift since Berlin is ferrying crack troops from England, Tripoli and Cyprus into the canal zone. Two brigades—one of tough paratroopers—came in the first week. Early this month a Tripoli-Fayid airlift began pouring in Britain's first division of guards. Forces of undisclosed strength have arrived unannounced by sea. The Royal Air Force has been boosted by four squadrons of antiaircraft troops and several jet fighter squadrons.

One high British officer's comment was "we'll have enough here to look after ourselves."

The small, poorly equipped Egyptian army was cut in two by Gen. Erskine's sudden deployment of troops to seal off the canal zone. The biggest single Egyptian force, more than a division, is isolated on the Sinai peninsula. Remaining Egyptian forces are scattered in the Nile delta and at Alexandria.

PENANG (AP) — The Indian community has "a future" in Malaya if it "strives on the right lines."

That is the view of the new representative of the Government of India in Malaya, M. Gopola Menon.

Menon who until recently was in Lake Success attached to the Indian Delegation to the United Nations, arrived in Malaya a month ago. Menon feels very optimistic about Malaya's evolution to nationhood "in the very near future." He cited America's rise to mighty nationhood when he expressed his firm beleif that Malayans should find no difficulty to form a single nation despite the diverse races living in this country.

Truck Carries Tunes For Famed Organist

AP Newsfeatures

LINCOLN, Ill. — It would take John LaMothe, organist and pianist, a week of continuous playing to get all the tunes he knows out of his system. There are 10,000 of them.

JOHN LAMOTHE plays one of the 10,000 tunes he knows.

Performing in 22 states and Canada, he travels 30,000 miles a year to play at fairs, conventions, celebrations and for shows sponsored by two large machinery firms —lugging his electric organ along.

Since he began evincing an interest in music when 5, LaMothe has entertained royalty, toured with stars of the silent movies, performed as a clown, served his country in the Army and played in Chicago's large theaters.

When a lad in the Windy City, LaMothe scampered back to church after worship, climbed on the piano stool and played from memory what he had heard. Then he took lessons from the church organist and eventually took over the organist's job. This led to the start of his professional career in the nickel theaters. He played piano accompaniments for silent pictures.

In 1916 organs invaded the theaters and LaMothe was one of the first to perform at the console. Then he toured with Mildred Harris, then the wife of Charlie Chaplin. The organist who played for such stars as Irene Rich, Rudolph Valentino and Lou Cody.

Trading the keyboard for a rifle, he became an infantryman in Uncle Sam's World War I Army and saw service in France. Regularly he drew assignment to the "entertainment detail" and performed for the Duchess of Luxembourg and the daughter of President Woodrow Wilson.

Back in the States after the war, the musician signed for his old job with the Warner Bros. theater chain in Chicago. Advancing, he received billing as a "spotlight organist." But talking pictures came and "spot organists" went out.

Next was a series of radio appearances and then in 1938, with the appearance of the electric organ, LaMothe took to the road as a traveling entertainer. He has been at it ever since.

He has developed a routine he calls "The Man With 1,000 Faces," using rubber masks and varying accompaniments to the delight of his audiences. LaMothe's preferences are for the old tunes, "Give me 'Tea for Two,' and 'Indian Love Call,'" he says.

While the organ is his first love, the father of two sons plays the piano and the accordion. The 40-year veteran of the musical circuit has missed only one engagement so far as he can remember. That was when a Chicago South Side theater burned down.

Philippines Election Troubles

The major opposition to President Quirino's Liberal party in the election in the Philippines came from the Nacionalista Party, among whose leaders is Jose Laurel. Laurel, a puppet of Japanese Fascists during Word War II, was running for senator. In 1949, when he opposed Quirino for the Presidency, Laurel received at least tacit support from the Huks.

The Huk leader, 37-year-old Luis Taruc, is an avowed Communist. His leadership has not always been clandestine. In June, 1948, he conferred with President Quirino and pledged allegiance to the government, with Quirino in return granting amnesty for members of the Huk.

However, only a handful of Huks registered or turned in their arms. Taruc occupied for only a short time the seat in the House of Representatives to which he had been elected in 1946, and in 1949 an electoral tribunal annulled Taruc's election.

Many Filipinos lived necessarily in close contact with the Japanese during World War II and fell into a kind of unwilling collaboration with the occupation troops. Thus Laurel's past affiliation taints the Nacionalista party today less than might otherwise be expected. Indeed, President Quirino's predecessor, Manuel Roxas, had accepted a post in the Japanese puppet government. Before his death in April, 1948, Roxas had proclaimed an amnesty for all persons accused of political collaboration or trading with the enemy during World War II.

The Presidency was not at issue in the November 13 election. Quirino, who had been vice president under Roxas, was elected to a full four-year term as President in November, 1949.

However, the election results might well be a clue to how the nation will vote in 1953. Except among the Huks, who view both major parties as "puppets of American imperialism," political agitation in the Philippines continually revolves around the country's sorry economic plight and charges of graft and corruption against whichever party happens to be in power.

A United States survey mission headed by former Under Secretary of the Treasury Bell recommended in a report in October, 1950, that this country grant the Philippines a loan totaling $250 million over a five-year period. To qualify for this additional U. S. aid, the Manila government was to adopt sounder fiscal policies, enforce better working conditions, expand social services, purge its own and business circles of profiteers.

The Bell report was angrily denounced by aides of President Quirino even before its release. Filipino grafters, they said, were "mere pikers" compared to American ones.

Quirino himself repudiated the attack on the Bell report and pledged his government to the recommended reforms. In November, 1950, Quirino signed an ECA agreement providing for a five-year economic development program underwritten by a $250 million U. S. loan.

Another Quandary For U. S.

The U. S. delegation to the UN General Assembly in Paris has been put on the spot about the French protectorate over Morocco. The Arab League States, acting for Morocco, not a UN member, want the Assembly to take up their charges that the French control is violating (1) the UN charter; (2) the UN Declaration of Human Rights; (3) the French-Moroccan treaty of 1912. Our delegation has voted with the French and the British to postpone discussions of the charges, but the Arabs, supported by the Russians, demand consideration now.

The French argue that their administration of Morocco is purely an internal and domestic issue over which UN has no jurisdiction, even for discussion. If we fail to support this French contention in any showdown, France may well refuse to support us on other issues before UN—and we can ill afford to antagonize one of the five veto-power states.

If we do support the French on Morocco, we shall again be called the imperialist, capitalist, warmongering, etc., etc. enemy of oppressed peoples. Was a time when small nations standing up to great powers looked to your Uncle Sam for sympathy, but now the Egyptians, the Iranians, and the rebels in Indo-China and Malaya are denouncing us as in cahoots against their legitimate aspirations for freedom.

The issue of Morocco in the UN Assembly is all the more ticklish for us because, under an agreement of last February with France, we acquired the right to construct seven air bases in French Morocco. Our first construction work there, at Port Lyautey, has generated friction with both the Moroccans and the French officialdom.

Prohibition Party Nominates

The Prohibition Party—yes, it's still around—is holding its 1952 nominating convention in Indianapolis this week. In 1948 its candidates for President and Vice President polled only 103,216 votes, less than one-fourth of one per cent of all votes cast.

However, this vote was almost 40 per cent larger than the 1944 vote, and almost twice the vote for the party in 1940. The Prohibition party was on the ballot in only 18 of the 48 states in 1948, getting more votes in California than in any other state. Among the large states where the party was off the ballot were New York and Ohio.

Even when Dry sentiment was strong in the United States, the Prohibition party never polled as much as two per cent of the total national vote. In fact, only after the Drys stopped trying to work through that party, and began to play off one of the major parties against the other, did they put legal prohibition across in most of the states and then in the whole nation. An eminent Dry leader of that period, Rev. Daniel A. Poling, was the Republican candidate for mayor of Philadelphia this year, only to be roundly defeated.

The Prohibition party, organized in 1872, is the oldest minor political party still operating in the United States. It was supposed to be strengthened by votes for women, but in 1920, the first year of nation-wide equal suffrage in a Presidential election, the party polled 15 per cent fewer votes than four years before. Most Drys were working in, on, and through the two major parties.

Hearing Aid Fittings

Hearing aids are as common as automobiles but are far more difficult to select. There are many types on the market and some manufacturers make a variety to meet the demands of the various kinds of degrees of deafness. Such individual needs make it unwise for a prospective buyer to decide on the same hearing aid that a friend or neighbor found successful. This is likely to happen because many of the hard of hearing are timid and hesitate to make a thorough investigation of the available devices.

When a person discovers that his hearing is failing, he should consult a physician who specializes in ear disorders. There are numerous causes of deafness and some, such as obstruction by wax, are cured in a jiffy. Surgery or medicine helps others. A large percentage of the remainder would benefit from a hearing aid. The physician often will proceed from there by testing with an audiometer the amount of hearing loss in each ear. Then the decision is made about the side on which the device is to be worn. When impairment is mild the poorer ear is preferred, to maintain as much bilateral hearing as possible. Those with severe loss will grasp at any straw and choose the better side.

The physician decides whether a bone conduction or the more common air conduction device is better. The former is used only in rare instances. It fits over the mastoid bone just behind the ear lobe and is less conspicuous than the air conduction variety but cannot be used as a substitute in the ordinary forms of deafness. Before going out for a fitting, one more problem must be solved. How loud should the instrument be? Some are so powerful that the sound would be annoying and sometimes downright painful. Here too the ear specialist can be of service in determining whether the device should be of the high, medium, or low maximum loudness.

From this point on, most deafened persons are on their own. Those who go to a store where only one model is sold are likely to be told of the advantages of only this particular aid. A wiser plan is to visit an audiology or a hearing clinic. Audiology clinics are preferred; they generally are associated with large hospitals or medical schools and are staffed by specialists and technicians trained in speech and hearing problems. The hearing clinics are more modest and usually have been established by associations interested in the hard of hearing. They consist of part time or volunteer workers who assist the patient in examining and testing various brands of reliable hearing aids. Advice along other lines also is given, including the importance of an ear insert molded to the conformation of the ear to assure a proper fitting of the aid.

The cost of hearing devices varies considerably but, as with automobiles, the upkeep must me considered. Hearing devices contain batteries, so refills over the period of a year may run into a tidy sum. This means that some of these little machines that are cheap initially may turn out to be more expensive in the long run than the higher priced models.

This is possible, especially if they were too busy to worry about the change of life. The majority of women, regardless of whether or not they have had children, are not bothered by the menopause. In this respect, your friends have drawn conclusions only from their own experiences.

PSORIASIS RESEARCH

General Ike And Senator Duff Clear Up Misunderstanding; Marines Recover From Food Poisoning; Mafia Smugglers Harass Immigration Officials

WASHINGTON — What General Eisenhower said to Senator Duff after Ike let him down by saying he hadn't "heard from Senator Duff directly or indirectly for a long time" is one of the most speculated questions in Washington. It's like the debate over what the governor of South Carolina said to the governor of North Carolina.

However, part of what Ike told the auburn-haired senator from Pennsylvania, briefly summarized, was this:

"I'm sorry. I never had so many questions coming at me all at once and I didn't realize what I was saying until it slipped out."

The two men completely patched things up, and Eisenhower retrieved his fumble at a subsequent press conference by indicating that he had no objection to the operations of friends who "have been my friends for so long they believe they know how I would react."

SENATOR ON THE CUFF — Thirty senators left for home last month without paying up their bills at the Senate dining room. On top of this, Nation-Wide Food Service, which runs the dining room, has been trying to collect some senatorial bills for six months to a year. Senators just don't pay easily. The list of senatorial deadbeats has been turned over to the Senate Rules Committee, but it is better guarded than any secret regarding the atom bomb. I can report, however, that one senator is carried on the cuff for $500; another, defeated in 1950, still hasn't paid his bill.

UNLUCKY SMALL BUSINESS—The free-enterprise systems—and small businessmen in particular—took it on the chin again when the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division was forced by congressional penny-pinching to fire 25 per cent of its total professional staff. This cut will tie the hands of the trust-busters at a time when the nation's largest corporations are becoming so fat with defense contracts they threaten to drive thousands of small businessmen to the wall. Man chiefly responsible for the attack on the trust-busters is Congressman John Rooney of Brooklyn, Democrat.

GOVERNMENT STEVEDORES—Though New York dock strikers didn't halt military shipments, Pentagon planners are worried that some future strike will. They plan a new government organization composed of longshoremen and stevedores, who will be regular government civil service employes—like postmen—and thus not permitted to strike. The Pentagon believes this will insure protection for military supplies in the event of future labor trouble on the waterfront.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR DEPARTMENT — Marine Corps families, alarmed over rumors that a serious dysentery epidemic has hospitalized more than 1,200 Marines on maneuvers off the Atlantic Coast, should know the real facts: A mild form of food poisoning infected 208 Marines only. However, a thousand of their buddies had to be quarantined briefly until doctors could diagnose the trouble. The quarantine has now been lifted and all 208 of the sick Marines are back, taking part in the big training invasion at Onslow Beach, N. C.

Mafia Smuggling Ring

It has been kept out of the newspapers, but immigration agents have been ordered to round up "hundreds" of Sicilian desperadoes, believed smuggled into this country. They have been aided and protected by the powerful Mafia, the secret underworld society that holds a mysterious control over the nation's top racketeers.

The original tip to be on the lookout for these Sicilian bandits came from the Army nearly two years ago. Warned a secret Army report: "Many hundreds of members of bandit gangs have been landed in the United States clandestinely.". . . They have been "arriving at almost every port on the East Coast, sometimes being taken off in small boats before the ship docked and at other times being taken off by members of the crew who were also Sicilians."

Full story is told in a recent confidential report by C. H. Pennington, chief immigration investigator for New York. It reads:

"The bandits usually went to North Africa by fishing boats, and there went aboard Sicilian boats, compelling the officers to take them aboard as stowaways under the threat of what might happen to their families in Sicily if they did not.

"The smuggling rings are operated like most any business might be operated. The affairs of the organization are usually directed by one person who in private business would be called the manager or the president. Under his direction, so-called salesmen look for persons in the United States who have relatives abroad, want them brought into the United States and have sufficient funds to pay to have them brought in.

"These salesmen have contacts amongst the foreign-born who will get them business. In addition, the organizations have persons in the countries to pick up additional business, see that proper arrangements are made and that the stowaway is placed aboard the vessel in care of the proper persons."

Pennington's confidential report also takes a crack at legitimate businessmen "known to have obtained cheap labor (smuggled aliens) and at the same time retain their own air of respectability."

"A large (Newark, N. J.) road contractor," says Pennington, "was obtaining this type of labor in large numbers . . . A large-scale investigation was conducted that resulted in the apprehension of about 90 aliens, most of whom had arrived in the United States as stowaways."

The Sicilian bandits smuggled into this country are believed to be serving as gunmen and runners for the Mafia.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Hermitage

In a way, I was astonished by the grandeur and beauty of "The Hermitage." The Democrats had so ardently painted Andrew Jackson as a common man, by which, in our English language, we can only mean a vulgar, boorish, cheap person. But no comman man could have built and furnished, much less lived in such a house as "The Hermitage." Nor would a vulgarian have loved the gardens and the magnificent trees of this place.

Obviously, Andrew Jackson was an uncommon man or he could not have had such a career as his, nor could an ordinary peasant have penned the glorious lines, worthy perhaps of a Robert Browning, which the hero of New Orleans placed upon the grave of his wife Rachel:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22nd of December, 1828. Age, 61 years. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind; she delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures, and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods; to the poor she was a benefactor; to the rich an example; to the wretched a comforter; to the prosperous an ornament; her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her Creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death, when he bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

He had arranged for only these words on his own gravestone:

"General Andrew Jackson
Born March 15, 1767
Died June 8, 1845"

There is, in a sense, a proud, even an arrogant simplicity in the one word, "General." He omits all honors including the Presidency and uses only the highest rank of his profession.

Over the years I have read considerably on Andrew Jackson, but it was not until last week, when visiting Nashville, Tennessee, that I pursued my favorite habit of making pilgrimages to historic sites. In such buildings, if one is sensitive to floors and ceilings and furniture, somehow the atmosphere of other days recreates itself. I could almost hear Andrew Jackson speaking in adoring whispers to his Rachel and confiding his secret yearnings to his servant Uncle Alfred, whose remains are buried in the garden close to the general.

No common man was Andrew Jackson, lawyer, real estate speculator, horse fancier and racer. Show me the kind of home a man builds for himself and I know the man. "The Hermitage" clearly bespeaks the joy of living. It was a happy, contented tone and while its furnishings are not of the taste or quality of the Salem houses built by the millionaires who were making their fortunes in the China trade, it does tell the story of a man who enjoyed a broad and gay life, who ate and drank joyously and loved flowers and horses and music. Jackson played the banjo, flute and violin, and Rachel the piano, and I should imagine they sang together.

There is nothing primitive, nothing of the backwoodsman here. Long before Jackson went to New Orleans as a general or to Washington as President, he had established himself as a successful lawyer, a man of means and a considerable landowner.

It is perhaps not astonishing, therefore, that as President, he paid off the national debt. Men who love homes and build them as though they were temples generally fear debt.

I could not help wondering, as I passed from room to room in "The Hermitage," what Andrew Jackson would have thought of a $258,000,000,000 debt for his country. I wonder what he would have thought of a tax system that makes it difficult for a man to save out of his earnings to buy his own land and build his own home for the woman he loves.

Fancy biographers research these strong figures into vulgarians; they debunk personality into a democratic smallness; their yardstick is the cheapness of their own minds. But they never really know the man, for they cannot understand love of the soil.

Having spent a morning in "The Hermitage," I am sure Andrew Jackson is not the figure that the Democratic National Committee wants me to think he is; nor is Jefferson, the builder of "Monticello." These were heroic creatures of ability, means and character who lived by building.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Trouble We Shall See

WASHINGTON

In their somewhat mercurial way, the American policy makers have become a lot more hopeful about Soviet purposes in these last months. The theory is that Western rearmament, although miserably retarded and very far from complete, has at least gone far enough to inspire the Kremlin with real fear of a major war. Enough faith is placed in this theory so that a slowdown of Western rearmament is actually being discussed in some quarters.

Unfortunately this new optimism about the Kremlin's intentions, which is largely based on expert judgment, is just about counterweighted by hard facts giving rise to pessimism of a different kind. There may be less reason to worry about what the Kremlin is going to do; but there are certainly more reasons to worry about the internal difficulties of the Western alliance.

Some of these are simple military difficulties. For instance, the Korean fighting has revealed grave defects in our fighter aircraft, such as the need for cannon armament which can knock down heavy bombers. Yet fighters with the right armament, speed and other qualities will not be coming off the line in quantity before 1953 at the earliest. Other difficulties again are directly political. For instance, the problem of Germany's new status and Germany's integration into the Western defense organization is proving discouragingly troublesome to disentangle.

Financial Crises Hurt

The really important difficulties, however, are those which reveal heavy and perhaps unbearable strains on the fundamental structure of the Western alliance itself. Among these, the most important is the recurrence of economic-financial crisis in Britain and France. Infinitely too little attention has been paid, as yet, to this very grave event.

Flights from both sterling and the franc are now in full progress. The British, who began the year with hard currency reserves of above $4,000,000,000, lost over $650,000,000 from their reserves in the quarter ending Sept. 30, and another $320,000,000 in the month of October alone. Withdrawals from reserves continuing at this rate will bankrupt Britain, totally, finally and irrevocably, in not too many months' time. The French, with much more slender reserves, have also been losing their nest-egg cash at an alarming rate; and their situation is further complicated by the weakness of their government and their loose currency controls.

The source of the trouble is the double strain imposed on France and Britain by the world price inflation, and by the burden of rearmament. The new Britsh government has moved boldly to halt the drain from their reserves. W. Averell Harriman is also concerting measures which will tide our allies over the immediate emergency. The most likely method will be, in effect, to borrow somewhere between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 from the enormous funds already appropriated but not yet expended for American defense, and to apply this borrowed money to helping Britain and France.

In fact, however, even if all goes well, the British are expected to lose an over-all total of $1,500,000,000 from reserves, and to consume a minimum of $300,000,000 of additional American aid, before they again achieve a precarious stability. The French position is comparable.

Need Cure At Source

Meanwhile the opinon is growing among higher American policy makers that crises of this sort will continue to recur, and will continue to demand new rescue parties, unless stronger measures are taken to cure the trouble at its source. Endless rescue parties are more and more disliked. Yet any attempt to go to the source of the trouble will demand a most radical readjustment in the existing economic political relationship between this country and the other Western allies.

Again, in the Middle East, another fearful strain is being produced by what may be called the disintegration of the flanks of the Western alliance. The position in Egypt, which has been described at length in reports from the scene in this space, is already downright terrifying. The State Department's efforts to cover the gaping wound in Iran with a nice little pink band-aid have finally broken down, as was inevitable. The whole of the Middle East, one of the world's three great strategically vital areas, is deeply inflamed. Again, a real cure will demand most radical measures.

The danger, then, has shifted. While the imminent risk of Kremlin aggression has grown much less, another imminent risk, of a serious break-down within the Western alliance, has grown much greater. It is six of one and half-a-dozen of the other. For the moment the Western alliance is immobilized or even greatly weakened by such a break-down, the risk of Kremlin aggression will again become very great.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—How the British government or the government of India or any other government in the world can hereafter maintain diplomatic relations with the Communist regime in China after the disclosures of barbarism just made will be difficult to understand.

The "left wing" school of thought, which in the United States and elsewhere has been insisting that military supremacy alone in a given area is all that is needed to merit diplomatic recognition, will have to abandon that narrow concept now. For the failure of any government to discharge international obligations—and that includes humane treatment of prisoners—is an even more important requirement for recognition than possession of any given area.

Thus for nearly 17 years the Communists held military supremacy over Russia, but the United States withheld recognition until an agreement was negotiated to require Russian adherence to certain international obligations.

Severe Punishment Due

What the Chinese Communists have done in murdering 5,790 United Nations prisoners and tens of thousands of Korean civilians would seem to deserve a denunciation so severe that no new government in China would ever be admitted to the UN or to the family of nations until those Chinese responsible for the Korean crimes are punished.

The Chinese leader Mao should be tried as a war criminal some day before the UN considers admitting any new government of China. If some anti-Communist regime does some day win military supremacy in China, the American government and other governments, before extending recognition, might well demand as a first condition the execution of the Communist leaders who permitted the Korean atrocities to happen.

It will be interesting to see what the UN does about the massacre of the prisoners of war who lost their lives fighting for the UN. Certainly a resolution condemning the action and declaring that the present Chinese leaders will be held personally accountable for what has happened would serve notice throughout Asia that the Western world doesn't intend to let such brutal deeds go unpunished.

Demands are arising already that the atom bomb be used on the Communists. This, however, is something wholly unrelated to the decision heretofore to withhold the use of the bomb. The military authorities have had no restraint placed upon them except one—that military effectiveness shall dictate the use of atom weapons. The argument up to now has been that not enough troop concentrations were available to drop the type of bomb which was used in World War II. But the murder of 5,500 Americans, out of 5,790 UN prisoners reported killed by both Chinese and North Korean commanders, will make the next decision on atom bombs easier for the UN forces to apply.

Word Is Valueless

Disclosure by the 8th Army's judge advocate general, Colonel James M. Hanley, of the statistics of the murders is a significant development. It tells the Chinese rulers that the UN negotiators have had no illusions about that unsettled point in the armistice talks which concerns a possible exchange of prisoners. The Communists haven't many UN prisoners left to give back, and, now that the facts are revealed, a breaking-off of truce negotiations would not be surprising. For there isn't much to negotiate with an enemy guilty of such barbarism that it violates all humane rules. Such an enemy's word on a truce agreement would be valueless.

The horrible part of the whole story is the anguish which the latest reports will cause the parents and relatives of those boys who up to now have been listed as "missing." It had been hoped that the Chinese might have kept alive most of the prisoners. If, of course, the reports announced by Colonel Hanley are incorrect, all the Communists have to do now is to produce the prisoners and disprove the report. But the disclosure of the reports available to the American military authorities was undoubtedly decided upon because the prospect of a large number returning was considered hopeless.

Communist China is not deserving of any place in the family of nations, and the UN would be justified in deciding to aid openly all elements in China which have for their objective the overthrow of the Communist rulers.

Philippines Election Troubles

The major opposition to President Quirino's Liberal party in the election in the Philippines came from the Nacionalista Party, among whose leaders is Jose Laurel. Laurel, a puppet of Japanese Fascists during Word War II, was running for senator. In 1949, when he opposed Quirino for the Presidency, Laurel received at least tacit support from the Huks.

The Huk leader, 37-year-old Luis Taruc, is an avowed Communist. His leadership has not always been clandestine. In June, 1948, he conferred with President Quirino and pledged allegiance to the government, with Quirino in return granting amnesty for members of the Huk.

However, only a handful of Huks registered or turned in their arms. Taruc occupied for only a short time the seat in the House of Representatives to which he had been elected in 1946, and in 1949 an electoral tribunal annulled Taruc's election.

Many Filipinos lived necessarily in close contact with the Japanese during World War II and fell into a kind of unwilling collaboration with the occupation troops. Thus Laurel's past affiliation taints the Nacionalista party today less than might otherwise be expected. Indeed, President Quirino's predecessor, Manuel Roxas, had accepted a post in the Japanese puppet government. Before his death in April, 1948, Roxas had proclaimed an amnesty for all persons accused of political collaboration or trading with the enemy during World War II.

The Presidency was not at issue in the November 13 election. Quirino, who had been vice president under Roxas, was elected to a full four-year term as President in November, 1949.

However, the election results might well be a clue to how the nation will vote in 1953. Except among the Huks, who view both major parties as "puppets of American imperialism," political agitation in the Philippines continually revolves around the country's sorry economic plight and charges of graft and corruption against whichever party happens to be in power.

A United States survey mission headed by former Under Secretary of the Treasury Bell recommended in a report in October, 1950, that this country grant the Philippines a loan totaling $250 million over a five-year period. To qualify for this additional U. S. aid, the Manila government was to adopt sounder fiscal policies, enforce better working conditions, expand social services, purge its own and business circles of profiteers.

The Bell report was angrily denounced by aides of President Quirino even before its release. Filipino grafters, they said, were "mere pikers" compared to American ones.

Quirino himself repudiated the attack on the Bell report and pledged his government to the recommended reforms. In November, 1950, Quirino signed an ECA agreement providing for a five-year economic development program underwritten by a $250 million U. S. loan.

There are numerous causes of deafness and some, such as obstruction by wax, are cured in a jiffy. Surgery or medicine helps others. A large percentage of the remainder would benefit from a hearing aid. The physician often will proceed from there by testing with an audiometer the amount of hearing loss in each ear. Then the decision is made about the side on which the device is to be worn. When impairment is mild the poorer ear is preferred, to maintain as much bilateral hearing as possible. Those with severe loss will grasp at any straw and choose the better side.

The physician decides whether a bone conduction or the more common air conduction device is better. The former is used only in rare instances. It fits over the mastoid bone just behind the ear lobe and is less conspicuous than the air conduction variety but cannot be used as a substitute in the ordinary forms of deafness. Before going out for a fitting, one more problem must be solved. How loud should the instrument be? Some are so powerful that the sound would be annoying and sometimes downright painful. Here too the ear specialist can be of service in determining whether the device should be of the high, medium, or low maximum loudness.

From this point on, most deafened persons are on their own. Those who go to a store where only one model is sold are likely to be told of the advantages of only this particular aid. A wiser plan is to visit an audiology or a hearing clinic. Audiology clinics are preferred; they generally are associated with large hospitals or medical schools and are staffed by specialists and technicians trained in speech and hearing problems. The hearing clinics are more modest and usually have been established by associations interested in the hard of hearing. They consist of part time or volunteer workers who assist the patient in examining and testing various brands of reliable hearing aids. Advice along other lines also is given, including the importance of an ear insert molded to the conformation of the ear to assure a proper fitting of the aid.

The cost of hearing devices varies considerably but, as with automobiles, the upkeep must me considered. Hearing devices contain batteries, so refills over the period of a year may run into a tidy sum. This means that some of these little machines that are cheap initially may turn out to be more expensive in the long run than the higher priced models.

Mrs. R. M. writes: Two women of my acquaintance, now in their late 60s, had their last child in their early 40s. Both claim they had little difficulty during the menopause because of these late pregnancies. Do you think this is true?? ?

REPLY

This is possible, especially if they were too busy to worry about the change of life. The majority of women, regardless of whether or not they have had children, are not bothered by the menopause. In this respect, your friends have drawn conclusions only from their own experiences.

PSORIASIS RESEARCH

Yes, indeed. Most of it centers about the relationship of psoriasis to arthritis and fat metabolism. ACTH and cortisone also are being tried. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on psoriasis.

If big heads run in your family, it is not a defect. Other causes include rickets, acromegaly, hydrocephalus, and myxedema. The chances are that if any of these disorders were present they would have been detected by now.

No. Furthermore it is awkward and risky because we don't have eyes in the back of the head.

General Ike And Senator Duff Clear Up Misunderstanding; Marines Recover From Food Poisoning; Mafia Smugglers Harass Immigration Officials

WASHINGTON — What General Eisenhower said to Senator Duff after Ike let him down by saying he hadn't "heard from Senator Duff directly or indirectly for a long time" is one of the most speculated questions in Washington. It's like the debate over what the governor of South Carolina said to the governor of North Carolina.

However, part of what Ike told the auburn-haired senator from Pennsylvania, briefly summarized, was this:

"I'm sorry. I never had so many questions coming at me all at once and I didn't realize what I was saying until it slipped out."

The two men completely patched things up, and Eisenhower retrieved his fumble at a subsequent press conference by indicating that he had no objection to the operations of friends who "have been my friends for so long they believe they know how I would react."

SENATOR ON THE CUFF — Thirty senators left for home last month without paying up their bills at the Senate dining room. On top of this, Nation-Wide Food Service, which runs the dining room, has been trying to collect some senatorial bills for six months to a year. Senators just don't pay easily. The list of senatorial deadbeats has been turned over to the Senate Rules Committee, but it is better guarded than any secret regarding the atom bomb. I can report, however, that one senator is carried on the cuff for $500; another, defeated in 1950, still hasn't paid his bill.

UNLUCKY SMALL BUSINESS— The free-enterprise systems—and small businessmen in particular—took it on the chin again when the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division was forced by congressional penny-pinching to fire 25 per cent of its total professional staff. This cut will tie the hands of the trust-busters at a time when the nation's largest corporations are becoming so fat with defense contracts they threaten to drive thousands of small businessmen to the wall. Man chiefly responsible for the attack on the trust-busters is Congressman John Rooney of Brooklyn, Democrat.

GOVERNMENT STEVEDORES— Though New York dock strikers didn't halt military shipments, Pentagon planners are worried that some future strike will. They plan a new government organization composed of longshoremen and stevedores, who will be regular government civil service employes—like postmen—and thus not permitted to strike. The Pentagon believes this will insure protection for military supplies in the event of future labor trouble on the waterfront.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR DEPARTMENT — Marine Corps families, alarmed over rumors that a serious dysentery epidemic has hospitalized more than 1,200 Marines on maneuvers off the Atlantic Coast, should know the real facts: A mild form of food poisoning infected 208 Marines only. However, a thousand of their buddies had to be quarantined briefly until doctors could diagnose the trouble. The quarantine has now been lifted and all 208 of the sick Marines are back, taking part in the big training invasion at Onslow Beach, N. C.

Mafia Smuggling Ring

It has been kept out of the newspapers, but immigration agents have been ordered to round up "hundreds" of Sicilian desperadoes, believed smuggled into this country. They have been aided and protected by the powerful Mafia, the secret underworld society that holds a mysterious control over the nation's top racketeers.

The original tip to be on the lookout for these Sicilian bandits came from the Army nearly two years ago. Warned a secret Army report: "Many hundreds of members of bandit gangs have been landed in the United States clandestinely.". . . They have been "arriving at almost every port on the East Coast, sometimes being taken off in small boats before the ship docked and at other times being taken off by members of the crew who were also Sicilians."

Full story is told in a recent confidential report by C. H. Pennington, chief immigration investigator for New York. It reads:

"The bandits usually went to North Africa by fishing boats, and there went aboard Sicilian boats, compelling the officers to take them aboard as stowaways under the threat of what might happen to their families in Sicily if they did not.

"The smuggling rings are operated like most any business might be operated. The affairs of the organization are usually directed by one person who in private business would be called the manager or the president. Under his direction, so-called salesmen look for persons in the United States who have relatives abroad, want them brought into the United States and have sufficient funds to pay to have them brought in.

"These salesmen have contacts amongst the foreign-born who will get them business. In addition, the organizations have persons in the countries to pick up additional business, see that proper arrangements are made and that the stowaway is placed aboard the vessel in care of the proper persons."

Pennington's confidential report also takes a crack at legitimate businessmen "known to have obtained cheap labor (smuggled aliens) and at the same time retain their own air of respectability."

"A large (Newark, N. J.) road contractor," says Pennington, "was obtaining this type of labor in large numbers . . . A large-scale investigation was conducted that resulted in the apprehension of about 90 aliens, most of whom had arrived in the United States as stowaways."

The Sicilian bandits smuggled into this country are believed to be serving as gunmen and runners for the Mafia.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Hermitage

In a way, I was astonished by the grandeur and beauty of "The Hermitage." The Democrats had so ardently painted Andrew Jackson as a common man, by which, in our English language, we can only mean a vulgar, boorish, cheap person. But no comman man could have built and furnished, much less lived in such a house as "The Hermitage." Nor would a vulgarian have loved the gardens and the magnificent trees of this place.

Obviously, Andrew Jackson was an uncommon man or he could not have had such a career as his, nor could an ordinary peasant have penned the glorious lines, worthy perhaps of a Robert Browning, which the hero of New Orleans placed upon the grave of his wife Rachel:

"Here lie the remains of Mrs. Rachel Jackson, wife of President Jackson, who died the 22nd of December, 1828. Age, 61 years. Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind; she delighted in relieving the wants of her fellow creatures, and cultivated that divine pleasure by the most liberal and unpretending methods; to the poor she was a benefactor; to the rich an example; to the wretched a comforter; to the prosperous an ornament; her piety went hand in hand with her benevolence, and she thanked her Creator for being permitted to do good. A being so gentle and so virtuous slander might wound, but could not dishonor. Even death, when he bore her from the arms of her husband, could but transport her to the bosom of her God."

He had arranged for only these words on his own gravestone:

"General Andrew Jackson
Born March 15, 1767
Died June 8, 1845"

There is, in a sense, a proud, even an arrogant simplicity in the one word, "General." He omits all honors including the Presidency and uses only the highest rank of his profession.

Over the years I have read considerably on Andrew Jackson, but it was not until last week, when visiting Nashville, Tennessee, that I pursued my favorite habit of making pilgrimages to historic sites. In such buildings, if one is sensitive to floors and ceilings and furniture, somehow the atmosphere of other days recreates itself. I could almost hear Andrew Jackson speaking in adoring whispers to his Rachel and confiding his secret yearnings to his servant Uncle Alfred, whose remains are buried in the garden close to the general.

No common man was Andrew Jackson, lawyer, real estate speculator, horse fancier and racer. Show me the kind of home a man builds for himself and I know the man. "The Hermitage" clearly bespeaks the joy of living. It was a happy, contented tone and while its furnishings are not of the taste or quality of the Salem houses built by the millionaires who were making their fortunes in the China trade, it does tell the story of a man who enjoyed a broad and gay life, who ate and drank joyously and loved flowers and horses and music. Jackson played the banjo, flute and violin, and Rachel the piano, and I should imagine they sang together.

There is nothing primitive, nothing of the backwoodsman here. Long before Jackson went to New Orleans as a general or to Washington as President, he had established himself as a successful lawyer, a man of means and a considerable landowner.

It is perhaps not astonishing, therefore, that as President, he paid off the national debt. Men who love homes and build them as though they were temples generally fear debt.

I could not help wondering, as I passed from room to room in "The Hermitage," what Andrew Jackson would have thought of a $258,000,000,000 debt for his country. I wonder what he would have thought of a tax system that makes it difficult for a man to save out of his earnings to buy his own land and build his own home for the woman he loves.

Fancy biographers research these strong figures into vulgarians; they debunk personality into a democratic smallness; their yardstick is the cheapness of their own minds. But they never really know the man, for they cannot understand love of the soil.

Having spent a morning in "The Hermitage," I am sure Andrew Jackson is not the figure that the Democratic National Committee wants me to think he is; nor is Jefferson, the builder of "Monticello." These were heroic creatures of ability, means and character who lived by building.

Matter Of Fact

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Trouble We Shall See

WASHINGTON

In their somewhat mercurial way, the American policy makers have become a lot more hopeful about Soviet purposes in these last months. The theory is that Western rearmament, although miserably retarded and very far from complete, has at least gone far enough to inspire the Kremlin with real fear of a major war. Enough faith is placed in this theory so that a slowdown of Western rearmament is actually being discussed in some quarters.

Unfortunately this new optimism about the Kremlin's intentions, which is largely based on expert judgment, is just about counterweighted by hard facts giving rise to pessimism of a different kind. There may be less reason to worry about what the Kremlin is going to do; but there are certainly more reasons to worry about the internal difficulties of the Western alliance.

Some of these are simple military difficulties. For instance, the Korean fighting has revealed grave defects in our fighter aircraft, such as the need for cannon armament which can knock down heavy bombers. Yet fighters with the right armament, speed and other qualities will not be coming off the line in quantity before 1953 at the earliest. Other difficulties again are directly political. For instance, the problem of Germany's new status and Germany's integration into the Western defense organization is proving discouragingly troublesome to disentangle.

Financial Crises Hurt

The really important difficulties, however, are those which reveal heavy and perhaps unbearable strains on the fundamental structure of the Western alliance itself. Among these, the most important is the recurrence of economic-financial crisis in Britain and France. Infinitely too little attention has been paid, as yet, to this very grave event.

Flights from both sterling and the franc are now in full progress. The British, who began the year with hard currency reserves of above $4,000,000,000, lost over $650,000,000 from their reserves in the quarter ending Sept. 30, and another $320,000,000 in the month of October alone. Withdrawals from reserves continuing at this rate will bankrupt Britain, totally, finally and irrevocably, in not too many months' time. The French, with much more slender reserves, have also been losing their nest-egg cash at an alarming rate; and their situation is further complicated by the weakness of their government and their loose currency controls.

The source of the trouble is the double strain imposed on France and Britain by the world price inflation, and by the burden of rearmament. The new Britsh government has moved boldly to halt the drain from their reserves. W. Averell Harriman is also concerting measures which will tide our allies over the immediate emergency. The most likely method will be, in effect, to borrow somewhere between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 from the enormous funds already appropriated but not yet expended for American defense, and to apply this borrowed money to helping Britain and France.

In fact, however, even if all goes well, the British are expected to lose an over-all total of $1,500,000,000 from reserves, and to consume a minimum of $300,000,000 of additional American aid, before they again achieve a precarious stability. The French position is comparable.

Need Cure At Source

Meanwhile the opinon is growing among higher American policy makers that crises of this sort will continue to recur, and will continue to demand new rescue parties, unless stronger measures are taken to cure the trouble at its source. Endless rescue parties are more and more disliked. Yet any attempt to go to the source of the trouble will demand a most radical readjustment in the existing economic political relationship between this country and the other Western allies.

Again, in the Middle East, another fearful strain is being produced by what may be called the disintegration of the flanks of the Western alliance. The position in Egypt, which has been described at length in reports from the scene in this space, is already downright terrifying. The State Department's efforts to cover the gaping wound in Iran with a nice little pink band-aid have finally broken down, as was inevitable. The whole of the Middle East, one of the world's three great strategically vital areas, is deeply inflamed. Again, a real cure will demand most radical measures.

The danger, then, has shifted. While the imminent risk of Kremlin aggression has grown much less, another imminent risk, of a serious break-down within the Western alliance, has grown much greater. It is six of one and half-a-dozen of the other. For the moment the Western alliance is immobilized or even greatly weakened by such a break-down, the risk of Kremlin aggression will again become very great.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON—How the British government or the government of India or any other government in the world can hereafter maintain diplomatic relations with the Communist regime in China after the disclosures of barbarism just made will be difficult to understand.

The "left wing" school of thought, which in the United States and elsewhere has been insisting that military supremacy alone in a given area is all that is needed to merit diplomatic recognition, will have to abandon that narrow concept now. For the failure of any government to discharge international obligations—and that includes humane treatment of prisoners—is an even more important requirement for recognition than possession of any given area.

Thus for nearly 17 years the Communists held military supremacy over Russia, but the United States withheld recognition until an agreement was negotiated to require Russian adherence to certain international obligations.

Severe Punishment Due

What the Chinese Communists have done in murdering 5,790 United Nations prisoners and tens of thousands of Korean civilians would seem to deserve a denunciation so severe that no new government in China would ever be admitted to the UN or to the family of nations until those Chinese responsible for the Korean crimes are punished.

The Chinese leader Mao should be tried as a war criminal some day before the UN considers admitting any new government of China. If some anti-Communist regime does some day win military supremacy in China, the American government and other governments, before extending recognition, might well demand as a first condition the execution of the Communist leaders who permitted the Korean atrocities to happen.

It will be interesting to see what the UN does about the massacre of the prisoners of war who lost their lives fighting for the UN. Certainly a resolution condemning the action and declaring that the present Chinese leaders will be held personally accountable for what has happened would serve notice throughout Asia that the Western world doesn't intend to let such brutal deeds go unpunished.

Demands are arising already that the atom bomb be used on the Communists. This, however, is something wholly unrelated to the decision heretofore to withhold the use of the bomb. The military authorities have had no restraint placed upon them except one—that military effectiveness shall dictate the use of atom weapons. The argument up to now has been that not enough troop concentrations were available to drop the type of bomb which was used in World War II. But the murder of 5,500 Americans, out of 5,790 UN prisoners reported killed by both Chinese and North Korean commanders, will make the next decision on atom bombs easier for the UN forces to apply.

Word Is Valueless

Disclosure by the 8th Army's judge advocate general, Colonel James M. Hanley, of the statistics of the murders is a significant development. It tells the Chinese rulers that the UN negotiators have had no illusions about that unsettled point in the armistice talks which concerns a possible exchange of prisoners. The Communists haven't many UN prisoners left to give back, and, now that the facts are revealed, a breaking-off of truce negotiations would not be surprising. For there isn't much to negotiate with an enemy guilty of such barbarism that it violates all humane rules. Such an enemy's word on a truce agreement would be valueless.

The horrible part of the whole story is the anguish which the latest reports will cause the parents and relatives of those boys who up to now have been listed as "missing." It had been hoped that the Chinese might have kept alive most of the prisoners. If, of course, the reports announced by Colonel Hanley are incorrect, all the Communists have to do now is to produce the prisoners and disprove the report. But the disclosure of the reports available to the American military authorities was undoubtedly decided upon because the prospect of a large number returning was considered hopeless.

Communist China is not deserving of any place in the family of nations, and the UN would be justified in deciding to aid openly all elements in China which have for their objective the overthrow of the Communist rulers.

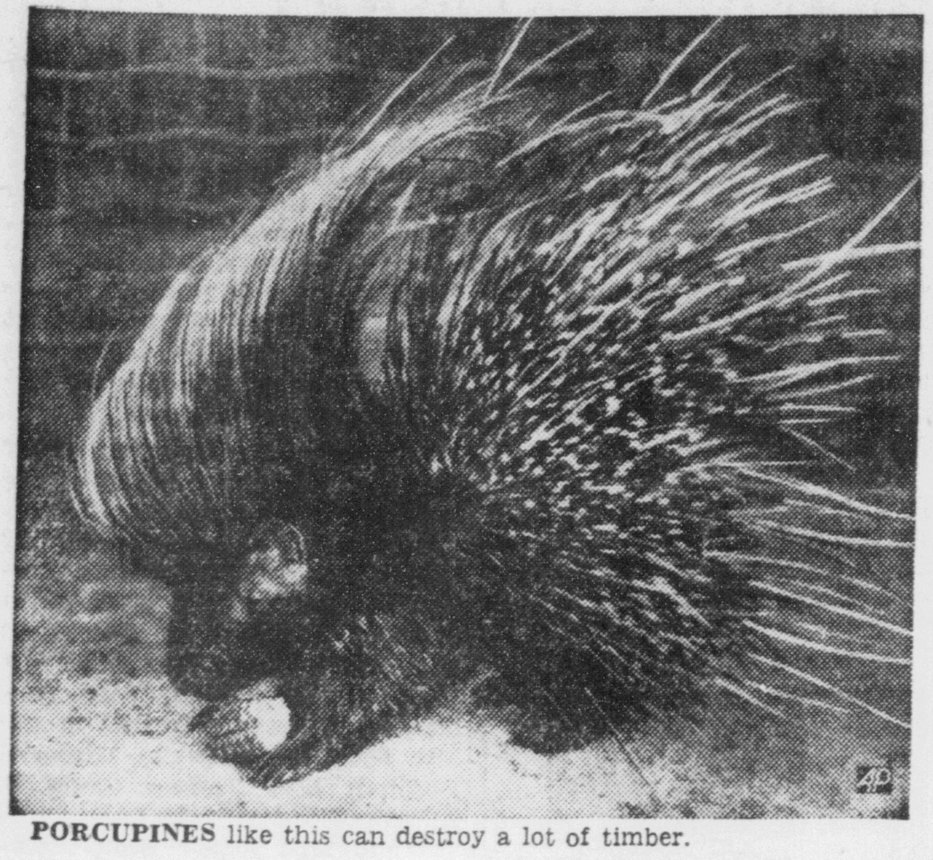
Pointed Problem



PORCUPINES like this can destroy a lot of timber.

By J. D. HOLMES
AP Newsfeatures

BILLINGS, Mont. — Porcupines may be slow, even dim-witted, but they can destroy as much Montana timber in one year as a 20,000,000 acre fire.

That's why foresters say "the time has come to shed sentimentality" about the quilled rodents which feed chiefly on bark and leaves.

Roy A. Phillips, supervisor of the Custer National Forest where 900 porcupines were killed last year, has advised rangers, stockmen, fishermen and hunters to keep killing the busy little animals.

He says porcupines generally feed on juicy ground vegetation in the summer. But winter usually finds them halfway up a pine tree, busy gnawing through the outer back in search of cambium, or inner bark.

A few hours of their work—and years of growth is ended for a young tree.

Porcupines aren't always filling an empty stomach or looking for salt residue when they chew on trees, cabin logs or recreation area furniture.

They may be just giving their teeth a workout.

Those long, sharp front teeth grow throughout the porky's lifetime. And unless they're kept short and straight by constant use, they will curl and grow upward into the skull.

The "sentimentality" Phillips referred to concerns the belief—scoffed at by foresters—that porcupines can be life savers to hungry persons lost in the forests.

"People lost and hungry would probably end up eating tree bark with the porcupines anyway," Phillips jokes, adding that people who have tried eating the rodent have found it wanting.

The yellow-haired porcupine of the West is brownish-black in general color and weighs 13 to 25 pounds when full grown.

It does not, as many believe, throw its 3 to 5 inch quills. Those painful barbs are transmitted by contact, and movement by the unhappy victim just sinks them deeper.

Curious calves and colts, who get a noseful of the needles, sometimes die if not treated in time. That's why stockmen back the foresters, whose porcupine slogan is "shoot on sight."

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

The "Little Man" Has No Baby Sitters

The "Little Man" came up to see me to buy a calf. He runs a country market in a small town, called Purdy's on the Harlem railroad.

"How's business?" I asked him.

"It was all right up to a year ago, but not so good now. I can't compete with those beauty parlors and baby sitters," he replied.

"What do you mean?"

"Supermarkets," he answered. "People who live 50 yards from my store travel 10 miles because of the fancy trimmings although my stuff is just as good and as cheap."

It aroused my curiosity, and I begin to investigate. The old-fashioned medicine show seems to have come back to sell groceries and patent nostrums. In my youth these traveling troupes would put on a big pitch to peddle some spring tonic.

Recently there was a product that originated in the South, named Hadacol, which, according to the wrapper, had many virtues and several others whispered by word of mouth although these were not publicized. The proprietor paid big prices for some of the most expensive Hollywood talent to put on a road carnival. It worked, for he recently sold out for several million dollars.

When I was a boy, you went into a drugstore to get prescriptions filled or a drink of soda water. Nowadays, you have to wade through bathing suits, water wings, and pass a lunch counter to reach the rear if you are interested in purchasing a remedy.

You may start out to buy a piece of bacon at a supermarket and come home with a haircut. Some of the more enterprising merchants have gala openings with models parading wearing crowns of roast beef instead of hats. You forget whether you came for fresh eggs or two on the aisle.

I find a female shopper can take with her a couple of offspring and her laundry. She deposits the latter as she enters the store, and it is finished by the time she leaves. Her kids may ride ponies under the eye of a baby sitter while she has her hair done and her blood pressure taken. She pays for most of these frills, it is true, but they are sugar coated, and the whole atmosphere is garish. If you were a man and saw Ava Gardner and Greta Garbo, according to her last published photograph, selling tickets at the same price, which one would get your business? Not that I want to introduce a note of sex.

Supermarkets are old-fashioned trading posts with their faces lifted and rouged and have everything but a stage door. Some of them may get that soon. How can the little fellow compete with this kind of a show?

"Do you want to see the calf, August?" I said.

We went to the barn where I showed him the animal which was seven weeks old, and I felt sad about selling him. That's the trouble with farming.

"How much do you want?" he asked.

"The last one I sent to an auction when six weeks old and got $91," I told him.

He felt his ribs.

"I'll give you $75."

I shook my head.

"Eighty, and that's my final offer."

I took it.

"And I'll tell you what I'll do," I concluded. "I am going to buy at least $80 worth of food at your store even if you haven't got any Powers models."

BILLINGS, Mont. — Porcupines may be slow, even dim-witted, but they can destroy as much Montana timber in one year as a 20,000,000 acre fire.

That's why foresters say "the time has come to shed sentimentality" about the quilled rodents which feed chiefly on bark and leaves.

Roy A. Phillips, supervisor of the Custer National Forest where 900 porcupines were killed last year, has advised rangers, stockmen, fishermen and hunters to keep killing the busy little animals.

He says porcupines generally feed on juicy ground vegetation in the summer. But winter usually finds them halfway up a pine tree, busy gnawing through the outer back in search of cambium, or inner bark.

A few hours of their work—and years of growth is ended for a young tree.

Porcupines aren't always filling an empty stomach or looking for salt residue when they chew on trees, cabin logs or recreation area furniture.

They may be just giving their teeth a workout.

Those long, sharp front teeth grow throughout the porky's lifetime. And unless they're kept short and straight by constant use, they will curl and grow upward into the skull.

The "sentimentality" Phillips referred to concerns the belief—scoffed at by foresters—that porcupines can be life savers to hungry persons lost in the forests.

"People lost and hungry would probably end up eating tree bark with the porcupines anyway," Phillips jokes, adding that people who have tried eating the rodent have found it wanting.

The yellow-haired porcupine of the West is brownish-black in general color and weighs 13 to 25 pounds when full grown.

It does not, as many believe, throw its 3 to 5 inch quills. Those painful barbs are transmitted by contact, and movement by the unhappy victim just sinks them deeper.

Curious calves and colts, who get a noseful of the needles, sometimes die if not treated in time. That's why stockmen back the foresters, whose porcupine slogan is "shoot on sight."

Congressional tax on bookmaking proves you can stop any kind of fun by making it legal.

Ten per cent is too much to pay on a guess. A bookie cannot charge a customer entrance like a race track or a subway.

The poor old bookie says he has to buy ice even in January. All the warm palms aren't in Miami.

Well, the government has finally dignified the racket with the tax. Now those bookies can feel the pangs of honesty.

Truth is that the pictures were taken in Malaya—and show Chinese Communists behind barbed wire, not Egyptians . . . General Van Fleet has cabled Washington they are using oxen in some areas to haul guns and supplies to the front. Van Fleet is convinced that transport will turn out to be the Communists' Achilles' heel, because Allied fliers are now destroying 7,000 Chinese trucks per month. If Allied planes can keep this up, the Russians, who are supplying these trucks, will call it quits.

The Old Second Guesser

By JOHN N. WHEELER

The "Little Man" Has No Baby Sitters

The "Little Man" came up to see me to buy a calf. He runs a country market in a small town, called Purdy's on the Harlem railroad.

"How's business?" I asked him.

"It was all right up to a year ago, but not so good now. I can't compete with those beauty parlors and baby sitters," he replied.

"What do you mean?"

"Supermarkets," he answered. "People who live 50 yards from my store travel 10 miles because of the fancy trimmings although my stuff is just as good and as cheap."

It aroused my curiosity, and I begin to investigate. The old-fashioned medicine show seems to have come back to sell groceries and patent nostrums. In my youth these traveling troupes would put on a big pitch to peddle some spring tonic.

Recently there was a product that originated in the South, named Hadacol, which, according to the wrapper, had many virtues and several others whispered by word of mouth although these were not publicized. The proprietor paid big prices for some of the most expensive Hollywood talent to put on a road carnival. It worked, for he recently sold out for several million dollars.

When I was a boy, you went into a drugstore to get prescriptions filled or a drink of soda water. Nowadays, you have to wade through bathing suits, water wings, and pass a lunch counter to reach the rear if you are interested in purchasing a remedy.

You may start out to buy a piece of bacon at a supermarket and come home with a haircut. Some of the more enterprising merchants have gala openings with models parading wearing crowns of roast beef instead of hats. You forget whether you came for fresh eggs or two on the aisle.

I find a female shopper can take with her a couple of offspring and her laundry. She deposits the latter as she enters the store, and it is finished by the time she leaves. Her kids may ride ponies under the eye of a baby sitter while she has her hair done and her blood pressure taken. She pays for most of these frills, it is true, but they are sugar coated, and the whole atmosphere is garish. If you were a man and saw Ava Gardner and Greta Garbo, according to her last published photograph, selling tickets at the same price, which one would get your business? Not that I want to introduce a note of sex.

Supermarkets are old-fashioned trading posts with their faces lifted and rouged and have everything but a stage door. Some of them may get that soon. How can the little fellow compete with this kind of a show?

"Do you want to see the calf, August?" I said.

We went to the barn where I showed him the animal which was seven weeks old, and I felt sad about selling him. That's the trouble with farming.

"How much do you want?" he asked.

"The last one I sent to an auction when six weeks old and got $91," I told him.

He felt his ribs.

"I'll give you $75."

I shook my head.

"Eighty, and that's my final offer."

I took it.

"And I'll tell you what I'll do," I concluded. "I am going to buy at least $80 worth of food at your store even if you haven't got any Powers models."

Woman Civic Club Hears Mrs. Douglas

A report of the highlights of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting in Houston, Texas, last spring, was given by Mrs. William A. Douglas, First District president, at the general meeting of the Woman's Civic Club, yesterday, in Emmanuel Episcopal parish house.

The meeting was opened with Mrs. Thomas Hind reading a poem, "Thanksgiving," by Elaine V. Emans, and the Choral Group singing, "Hymn of Thanksgiving." Mrs. H. T. Robinson, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Douglas reported the theme of the convention was "A New Birth of Freedom," and more than 2,000 delegates participated, representing the membership of nearly 11,500,000.

"In an organization so large, said Mrs. Douglas, "different areas have different problems and to establish a policy broad enough to cover the whole organization in 38 countries, meant a great deal of revising. Many issues were hotly contested. Discussion on Universal Military Training was not settled until the last day, when a resolution in it's favor was presented and adopted.

Civil Defense was another keynote of the convention. Nelson A. Rockefeller made a plea that the delegates return home and tell the women to wake up to their responsibilities in defense work in as much as all would be affected by the atom bomb, if such an attack should come. That those in areas not hit would have to help in the evacuation of the wounded and homeless.

Mrs. L. R. Meyers, chairman of the International Relations division of the First District, gave her impression of the convention.

Mrs. Edward T. Ryan called for volunteers to work for the Blood Bank being sponsored by the Red Cross. Donations were taken for the CARE for Korea drive. Announcement was made that the Choral group, with Mrs. Albert Paye, chairman would act as hostesses at the membership rally of the Golden Glow Club. Mrs. Albert W. Keight presided at the meeting.

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—I met Bunny Johnson this morning and later, when I sat down to write about her, I thought I would start off by calling her a brave person. But that didn't seem strong enough. Whatever she has transcends bravery; it goes into unbelievable doggedness, tenacity or, possibly, fanaticism.

Bunny is a honey-haired girl from Stratford, Conn., who a few years ago came down to New York to become one of John Robert Powers' best models. She worked at it for about a year and then she dropped out of sight, in a way. It was understandable. She had been knocked flat on her back by arthritis.

It's tough to see anyone with arthritis—I have an uncle who is the salt of the earth and has had it for 30 years; I have sat at his bedside and thought darkly of at least 15 persons who should have had it instead of him—but to see someone as young and pretty as Bunny racked by it isn't pleasant.

There were two items, however, to brighten the day. We were sitting in one of the offices of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, in the Biltmore — Bunny spends as much of her spare time as possible trying to help the foundation's campaign-fund drive—and she told me, calmly and undramatically, how she had fought for years now against the ailment. She seems to be winning.

She spent all night, night after night, week after week, just pressing down on her paralyzed knees in a special set of dynamic-tension exercises—and now she has the use of her knees. The arthritis has settled in her hip area now and it looks as if an operation is next in line. She has driven herself almost unmercifully in her fight against it. Whether she will win the fight is anyone's guess—but when you talk to her, you don't see how she can miss.

The other bright item: Bunny lives by herself in a little apartment near Columbia University—and there, friends are forever dropping in to cheer her, amuse her, argue with her, and cook, iron and wash for her. She just sits there in her wheelchair and watches them, or joins in, and loves every minute of it, in spite of the constant pain. I am a suspicious and cynical man —and to learn that there are foul-weather friends like Bunny's made my day, anyway, a complete one.

They opened a new East Side restaurant the other evening, a small, intimate, luxurious little place on upper Second Avenue called Maud Chez Elle, and I was happy to notice, among the assorted socialites, breakfast broadcasting teams and other free-loaders who turned up for the opening, the small, elegant man named Michael Arlen.

It could be that since the death of James J. Walker, once seen never forgotten, the debonair Mr. Arlen is the man who best illustrates that odd, exotic, foolishly absorbing cafe society way of life in Manhattan.

The amiable Maud did well in having him on hand for the unveiling of her fur-lined eatery; this is something like obtaining the "Good Housekeeping" seal of approval.

These must be difficult times for Mr. Arlen. Not because he no longer is writing much of anything. After he was such a literary lion of the Twenties, with his glittering "The Green Hat" and its most wonderful of all heroines, Irish March, he quite candidly admitted that writing as such didn't intrigue him. "Turning out two books a year, all alike, is my idea of decay and desperation," he said with obvious distaste.

No—Mr. Arden must be having a hard life because elegance is disappearing from the scene everywhere. He goes to the best restaurants and supper clubs in town and tries to keep up the pretense, but there is a casual air and informality these days about life, even in New York, that must depress him. Like Mr. Menjou, of whom we spoke recently, Michael Arlen ever was a man for starch and studs.

I remember something a friend once said of him: "I hate to call him by that beastly word—immaculate—but I will say it and have done with it. His dress shirts and waistcoats are by Hawes & Curtis, his shoes by Lobb. His ties and socks are a gracefully subdued symphony. His barber is the best in town. He has a gold cigaret case which Mr. Asprey was a fool to part with. His Rolls-Royce is at least six inches longer than any other Rolls-Royce. With evening dress he wears a gardenia, one white pearl and one black."

O tempore, o mores!

Wear your sunglasses on sunny winter days if you want to avoid squint, night blindness, and strain!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

If you've stowed your sunglasses with your summer garb, better dig them out. They are winter requisites according to tests conducted by the Army-Navy vision commission as well as by Dr. Robert H. Peckham of Temple university. After subjecting your eyes to glaring winter sunlight, your night vision is cut fifty per cent or more.

When you've driven over sun-blazoned roads, or after skating, fishing, golfing, or taking a long walk in bright sun light — and especially after shoveling snow — if you've overlooked the precaution of sunglasses, the vision you would ordinarily receive from the thirty candlepower headlights of your car may be diminished to as little as six candlepower. Dangerous? You bet!

Such exposure also has the effect of dimming the wattage in your reading lamps. Because of your loss of night vision, you need, temporarily at least, stronger bulbs in all home, shop or office lamps. Eye-strain, headaches, and excessive fatigue are other results you can expect.

Furthermore, the effects of such exposure can be long-lasting. Depending on the duration of exposure to glare, your eyes may take from a week to a month to recover their full night vision.

If sunglasses were less handsome and high styled for every type of dress there might be more reason for some reluctance to don them in winter. Actually they can be an attractive addition to your costume. For winter street clothes, choose a darker or more "citified" rim than you'd wear with sports, work or resort attire.

Some of the specially designed sunglasses worn for winter sports are worth investigating. Those with wide sidepieces are excellent for cutting down wind as well as glare. The dark-glass visor and goggle can be used to advantage in many other rugged sports besides skiing. The visor comes with a leather head band and adjusts up or down. The goggles are attached to an elastic band and fit the face so as to permit the maximum protection with ventilated comfort.

This winter, for the sake of your safety, the sake of your comfort, and the avoidance of squint lines, wear your sunglasses whenever you take the sun, especially when you take the sun on snow or ice!

Wear your sunglasses on sunny winter days if you want to avoid squint, night blindness, and strain!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

If you've stowed your sunglasses with your summer garb, better dig them out. They are winter requisites according to tests conducted by the Army-Navy vision commission as well as by Dr. Robert H. Peckham of Temple university. After subjecting your eyes to glaring winter sunlight, your night vision is cut fifty per cent or more.

When you've driven over sun-blazoned roads, or after skating, fishing, golfing, or taking a long walk in bright sun light — and especially after shoveling snow — if you've overlooked the precaution of sunglasses, the vision you would ordinarily receive from the thirty candlepower headlights of your car may be diminished to as little as six candlepower. Dangerous? You bet!

Such exposure also has the effect of dimming the wattage in your reading lamps. Because of your loss of night vision, you need, temporarily at least, stronger bulbs in all home, shop or office lamps. Eyestrain, headaches, and excessive fatigue are other results you can expect.

Furthermore, the effects of such exposure can be long-lasting. Depending on the duration of exposure to glare, your eyes may take from a week to a month to recover their full night vision.

If sunglasses were less handsome and high styled for every type of dress there might be more reason for some reluctance to don them in winter. Actually they can be an attractive addition to your costume. For winter street clothes, choose a darker or more "citified" rim than you'd wear with sports, work or resort attire.

Some of the specially designed sunglasses worn for winter sports are worth investigating. Those with wide sidepieces are excellent for cutting down wind as well as glare. The dark-glass visor and goggle can be used to advantage in many other rugged sports besides skiing. The visor comes with a leather head band and adjusts up or down. The goggles are attached to an elastic band and fit the face so as to permit the maximum protection with ventilated comfort.

This winter, for the sake of your safety, the sake of your comfort, and the avoidance of squint lines, wear your sunglasses whenever you take the sun, especially when you take the sun on snow or ice!

LaVale Drive Raises $3,135

The annual fund raising campaign conducted by the LaVale Volunteer Fire Company has netted $3,134 to date according to Cromwell C. Zembower, president.

Pledges are still being received, James A. Beacham, general chairman of the drive, announced at a meeting in the fire hall Tuesday night, and a committee has been named to keep contacting residents who were missed in the canvass.

Zembower stated that the drive workers were well pleased with the response shown by residents. He also noted the work of the ladies auxiliary in assisting the firemen during the campaign.

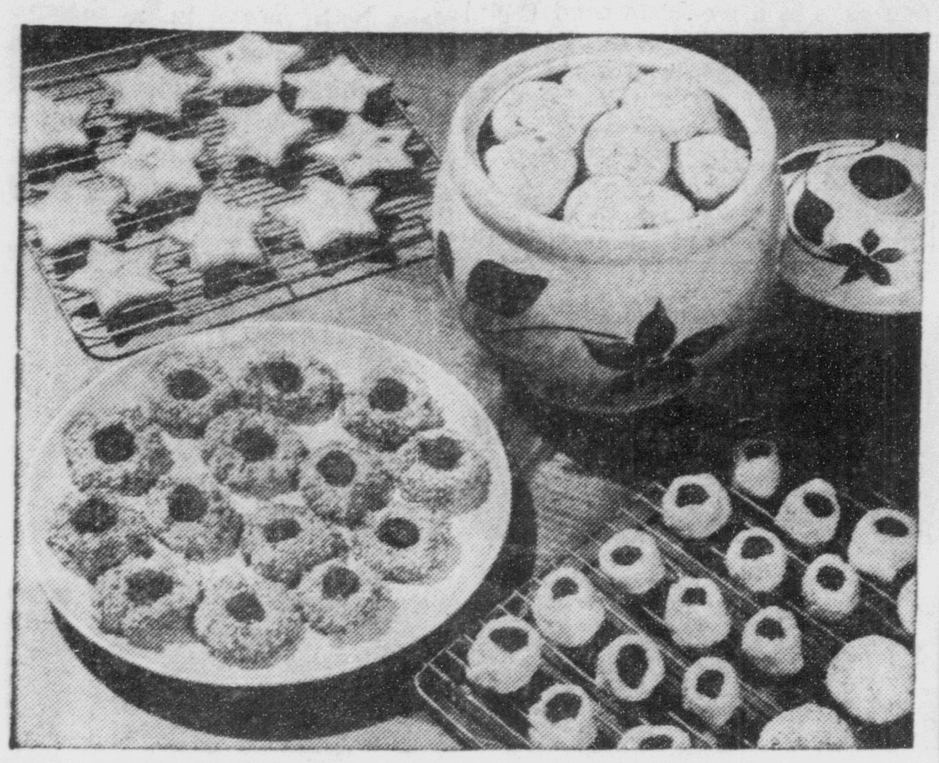
Maraschino Cherries Glamorize Cookies



These delicious varieties of maraschino cherry cookies will make your cooky jar the pride of your pantry shelf. Whether sliced and used as ingredients, or used whole as colorful toppings and fillings, maraschino cherries enhance the cooky-goodness with their characteristic almond flavor. For after-school snacks, dessert accompaniments and just plain nibbling, these tempting goodies are bound to satisfy the appetites of a cooky-hungry family.

Beginning clockwise with the cooky jar, here are the recipes to add to your collection of cooky favorites.

Cherry Kislings

(Makes 3 dozen small cookies)

1 cup butter or margarine (or ½ lb.)
¼ cup sugar
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sliced maraschino cherries, well-drained; or ½ cup sliced glace cherries
½ cup chopped Brazil nuts

In a large bowl, soften butter. Add sugar and cream well. Add remaining ingredients; mix thoroughly. Form dough into small round balls and place on ungreased cooky sheets. Bake in slow oven (300 degree) 30-40 minutes or until golden brown. Remove Cherry Kislings from cooky sheets and roll in confectioners' sugar.

Maraschino Cherry Roll-Ups

(Makes 4 dozen cookies)

1 3-ounce package cream cheese
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
Dash salt
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar
1 cup maraschino cherries

In a bowl, combine cream cheese, butter or margarine, flour and salt; blend thoroughly. Chill. Roll dough ⅛ inch thick on lightly floured board. Sprinkle surface of dough with confectioners' sugar. Cut in 1 x 3-inch rectangles. Place maraschino cherry on each and roll up. Place roll-ups on ungreased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven (350°) 15-17 minutes. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar.

Cherry Nut Crusted Cookies

(Makes 2 dozen cookies)

¼ cup butter
¼ cup shortening
¼ cup brown sugar
1 egg, separated
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup chopped nutmeats
12 maraschino cherries, cut in halves

In a bowl, cream butter and shortening together; add brown sugar and blend until creamy. Add egg yolk and vanilla and mix well. Stir in flour and salt until dough is smooth. Chill 1 hour or overnight. Roll into 1-inch balls. Dip balls in slightly beaten egg white; roll in chopped nuts. Place 1 inch apart on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven (375°) 5 minutes. Press maraschino cherry half into center of each cooky. Return to oven and bake 8 minutes. Remove from baking sheet and cool thoroughly.

Holiday Cookies

(Makes about 5 dozen cookies)

½ cup chopped maraschino cherries (about 20 cherries)
1 cup margarine
½ cup sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon almond extract
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt

Drain maraschino cherries on absorbent paper towels. In a large bowl, cream margarine and sugar thoroughly. Add until fluffy. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Gradually stir sifted dry ingredients into creamed mixture until well blended. Add drained maraschino cherries and mix thoroughly. Chill cooky dough for several hours. On lightly floured surface, roll small amounts of dough ⅛-inch thick. Cut with cooky cutter dipped into flour. Bake on ungreased cooky sheet in moderate oven (350°) 10-12 minutes or until delicately browned.

For decoration, outline baked cookies with colored or white icing.

Fall Dessert Winners

It's fall again! Trees are changing color. The air is filled with the smell of burning leaves. The days are crisp and clear.

This special time of year calls for special flavor treats. The light desserts of summer are set aside for those that are heartier, more colorful and spicy.

Cranberry Marble is one dessert that will fill the need for a special tangy fall treat. It's vanilla frozen dessert with whole cranberry sauce swirled through it—just as colorful and taste tingling as it sounds. And it's economical; a good reason for serving it often.

For a perfect accompaniment serve spicy, golden-brown Cinnamon Blondies. Made with coconut fudge mix, they're an unusual treat adding a distinctive flavor to the dessert. Easily made, having just a touch of spice, they'll be a favorite with you and the family.

CRANBERRY MARBLE

1½ cups milk
1 package vanillin freezing mix
½ cup whole cranberry sauce

Beat contents of package of vanillin freezing mix into milk with rotary beater until dissolved. Pour into freezing tray. When frozen firm, remove from tray to bowl. Break up with fork. Beat with electric or hand beater until fluffy. Put frozen dessert in refrigerator tray. Break up cranberry sauce with a fork and spread sauce on frozen dessert. Carefully spoon dessert over cranberries to produce a marbled effect. Continue freezing. Freeze until firm but mellow.

CINNAMON BLONDIES

1¼ cups all purpose flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 package coconut fudge mix
⅓ cup melted butter
2 eggs, well beaten
2 tablespoons water
¼ cup chopped nuts

Sift and measure flour. Add baking powder, salt, and cinnamon and sift again. To this flour mixture add contents of package of coconut fudge mix, butter, eggs, and water. Blend thoroughly. Pour into greased baking pan 9" x 13". Sprinkle chopped nuts on top. Bake it 350° F. for 30 minutes. Cut into bars for serving.

These crisp fall days are perfect for serving cranberry dishes and for trying the tempting new ones. Here's a recipe for Cranberry Ice that is especially nice to serve with the meat course.

Cranberry Ice

1 package raspberry sherbet mix
1 cup cranberry juice cocktail
1 cup water

Measure cranberry juice cocktail and water into a bowl. Add contents of package. Beat with rotary beater until dissolved — about 2 minutes. Pour mixture into refrigerator tray and place in freezing compartment. When mixture is firmly frozen, remove from tray to bowl. Break up into large lumps with a fork. Beat with rotary beater until free from lumps but still a thick mush. Return to refrigerator tray and place in freezing compartment until fairly firm. If frozen too hard, place in refrigerator just below freezing compartment to soften.

The days of Indian Summer are too perfect to be spent in the kitchen. The family though must be fed, so quickly prepared foods are the order of the day.

Use a packaged devil's food cake mix and you have a cake elegant enough for a banquet in just a few minutes. And 4 minutes is all the time it will take you to make almond frosting from coconut fudge mix. Coconut-almond frosting on devil's food cake is certainly a perfect combination for dessert tonight.

Almond Frosting

4 tablespoons milk
1 package coconut fudge mix
½ teaspoon almond extract
Toasted almonds

Keep water boiling in bottom of double boiler. Measure milk into top part. Add entire contents of package of coconut fudge mix. Allow to stand without stirring about a minute. Then stir 3 to 4 minutes — until glossy. DO NOT BEAT. Add almond extract. Frost 8" square devil's food cake immediately. To keep frosting soft for easy spreading, replace top of double boiler over hot water. Decorate with toasted almonds.

•—•—•

Try this for an unusual frosting treat.

Coffee Frosting

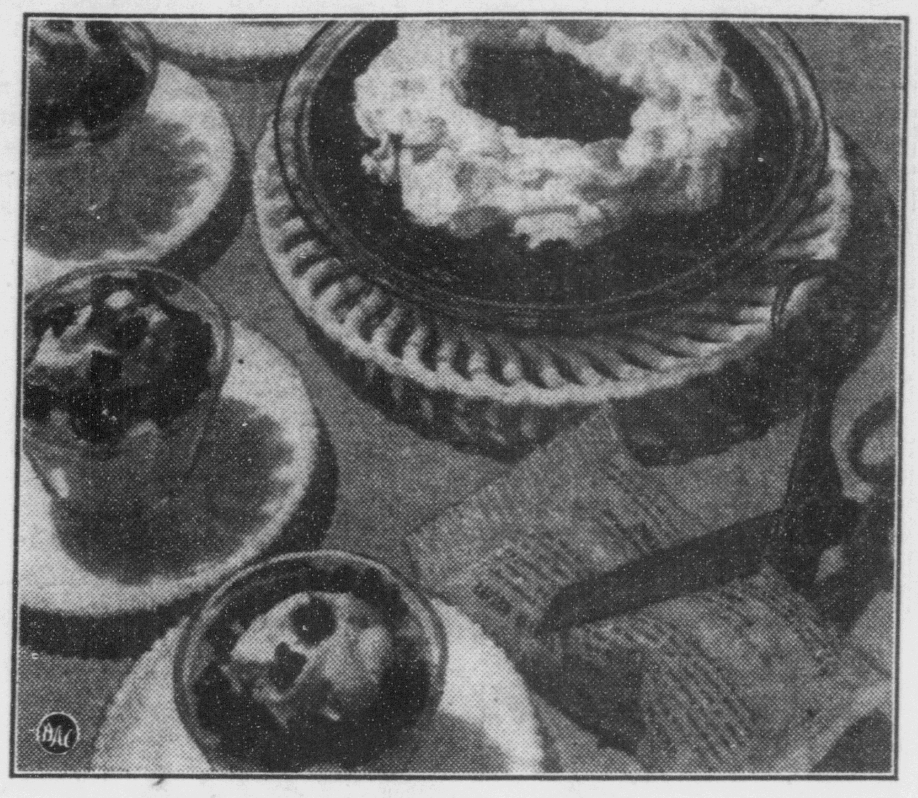
4 tablespoons milk
2 teaspoons instant coffee
1 package coconut fudge mix

Keep water boiling in bottom of double boiler. Measure milk and coffee into top part. Add entire contents of package of coconut fudge mix. Allow to stand without stirring about a minute. Then stir 3 to 4 minutes — until glossy. DO NOT BEAT. Frost cake immediately. To keep frosting soft for easy spreading, replace top of double boiler over hot water.

THANKSGIVING SOUP

To give guests something special in the way of soup, combine three of the favorites in the condensed line. Blend together 1 can each of condensed cream of asparagus, mushroom, and chicken soups. Stir in 2 soup-can measues of milk. Heat thoroughly but do not boil.

Thrifty Old Timers Made New With Semi-Sweet Chocolate



A PRETTY pair of puddings to play a budget duet are the Chocolate Surprise Pudding and Chocolate Bread Pudding pictured. The Chocolate Surprise Pudding in the custard cups is a new version of cabinet pudding made with stale cake cubes but liberally topped with candy-like morsels of semi-sweet chocolate and a delicate meringue. Bread Pudding with chocolate flavor is the second pudding's pride. The lighter, semi-sweet choccoate flavor is perfect for puddings, and each of these puddings requires only one-half package of semi-sweet chocolate morsels. The Chocolate Surprise Pudding in the custard cups is a new version of cabinet pudding made with stale cake cubes but liberally topped with candy-like morsels of semi-sweet chocolate and a delicate meringue. Bread Pudding with chocolate flavor is the second pudding's pride. The lighter, semi-sweet choccoate flavor is perfect for puddings, and each of these puddings requires only one-half package of semi-sweet chocolate morsels. For the recipes, see elsewhere on this page.

"Thanks" For Cranberry Pie!

Every section of the country has its traditional pattern for that meal of meals . . . Thanksgiving dinner. Vegetables may differ, salads may change . . . but roast turkey, cranberry sauce, and a Thanksgiving Pie are steady repeaters.

Surprise the family this year by bringing a beautiful cranberry pie to the table at dessert time. You'll surprise yourself when you find out how easy these Thanksgiving pies are to make. Each of the following is made with ready-to-serve cranberry sauce. That means the filling's practically ready for the shell as soon as the cans are opened.

Just a reminder . . . it doesn't take much more time to bake two pies than it does one. So be sure to have plenty on hand for drop-in guests . . . supper in the evening, too.

Cranberry Lattice Pie

- 2 1-pound cans whole cranberry sauce
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ cup brown sugar (or white)

Combine ingredients. Spoon into unbaked pastry shell. Cover with lattice topping. Bake 30 to 40 minutes in 425° F. oven or until crust is golden brown.

Old-Fashioned Cranberry Pie

- 2 1-pound cans whole cranberry sauce
- ½ cup raisins
- 3 tablespoons molasses
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Combine cranberry sauce, raisins, molasses, cornstarch. Spoon into unbaked pastry shell. Cover with lattice topping. Bake at 425° F. for 30 to 40 minutes or until crust is golden brown. Cool. Serve with or without cream.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

- ½ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 pound can whole cranberry sauce
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 eggs, separated
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 8-inch baked pastry shell

Mix sugar and cornstarch in double boiler. Then add cranberry sauce, salt, and lemon juice. Cook, stirring until thick. Beat egg yolks in custard cup. Add some of hot cranberry mixture to egg yolks in custard cup while beating. Then return to hot cranberry mixture and continue heating until thickened. Remove from heat, add butter and cool. Pour into 8-inch pie shell. Cover with meringue made from the egg whites and bake in slow oven 325° F. for 20 to 25 minutes.

MERINGUE: 2 egg whites, 4 tablespoons sugar.

Have eggs at room temperature. Beat until egg whites barely hold their shape. Add sugar gradually and continue beating until soft peaks form. Pile lightly on pie, place in oven at 325° F. until brown.

Cranberry Applesauce Pie

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatine
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1 pound can jellied cranberry sauce
- 1 No. 2 can applesauce (2 cups)
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell
- ½ cup whipping cream
- Nutmeg

Place gelatine in custard cup. Add cold water. Let stand 2 minutes. Place custard cup in pan of boiling water until gelatine dissolves. Empty the cranberry sauce and applesauce into a mixing bowl, add the lemon juice, sugar, and salt; beat with a rotary beater until smooth. Add belatine and mix well. Pour into pastry shell and chill until firm. Spread top with whipped cream and sprinkle with nutmeg.

'After The Game' Supper For Football Crowd

Football's here! Once again it's a grand time to have friends over after the game for a hearty supper. Naturally, as hostess, you'll want to serve something you can prepare in advance so you won't be forced to leave after the third quarter. That something that will be ready to eat in 30 minutes is Chili De Luxe. Prepare this casserole before the game and refrigerate, then when you get home, pop it in a moderate oven.

In the meantime, you may set out a big bowl of potato chips and a dish of assorted relishes. Perhaps you'll want to heat buttered French bread to serve with the casserole. For dessert, serve big wedges of apple pie with cheese.

Chili Meat De Luxe

- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 No. 2 can tomatoes
- ½ cup chopped green pepper, if desired
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons Chili powder
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 8-ounce package spaghetti, cooked
- ¼ pound Cheddar cheese, grated

Cook ground beef slowly until crumbly but not hard. Add onions, tomatoes, green pepper and seasonings. Cover and simmer 45 minutes. Alternate layers of cooked spaghetti or macaroni in a large greased casserole so the top layer is meat. Sprinkle grated cheese over mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 20 to 30 minutes or until cheese is melted and lightly browned. 6 to 8 servings.

Liver, Bacon Casserole

Liver and bacon join in this casserole. Cut strips of bacon in small pieces and panfry. Brown the thi liver slices in the bacon fat, the place both meats in a casserol with diced potatoes and a can o button mushrooms. Add cream sauc (or condensed mushroom soup t replace the button mushrooms. Bake for 1 to 1½ hours in a 300°F oven.

2 sprigs parsley
1 bayleaf
6 cloves
¼ cup diced onion
1 teaspoon sugar
⅓ cup crumbled blue cheese

Melt butter, add flour and seasonings; blend. Gradually add milk and cook until mixture boils and thickens, stirring constantly. Combine cooked tomatoes and remaining ingredients, except blue cheese, in saucepan; simmer 5 minutes. Sieve; measure about two cups puree, adding hot water if necessary. Just before serving stir hot puree slowly into hot cream sauce. Sprinkle with blue cheese and serve immediately. Serves 6.

Franks, Kraut

Frankfurters and sauerkraut are an old duet. For variation, season the kraut with brown sugar or caraway seed, a bit of diced raw potato or tart apple. Or at the last minute, fold a small amount of chili sauce into the kraut for serving delight with hot frankfurters.

Orange Cranberry Brew For Frosty Evenings

When there's a hint of frost in the air and heavy coats appear on the scene, it's time to try a hot spiced punch. This Orange Cranberry Brew is spicy yet tangy so it hits the spot on a brisk fall evening after the game or show. If you're rushed for time, you can make it up ahead of time and then heat it just before serving.

Orange Cranberry Brew

1 pound fresh cranberries
2 tbs. grated orange peel
6 sticks cinnamon
12 whole cloves
2 quarts water
1 quart orange juice
1 cup fresh lemon juice
1½ cups sugar

Combine cranberries, orange peel, cinnamon, cloves and water; cook until berries are soft. Strain and add sugar, fresh lemon and fresh orange juice. Heat to desired temperature and pour into pottery or heatproof bowl. Garnish with thin slices of orange and lemon studded with whole cloves.

Tomato-Blue Cheese Soup

4 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2½ cups milk
2 cups cooked tomatoes
2 sprigs parsley
1 bayleaf
6 cloves
¼ cup diced onion
1 teaspoon sugar
⅓ cup crumbled blue cheese

Melt butter, add flour and seasonings; blend. Gradually add milk and cook until mixture boils and thickens, stirring constantly. Combine cooked tomatoes and remaining ingredients, except blue cheese, in saucepan; simmer 5 minutes. Sieve; measure about two cups puree, adding hot water if necessary. Just before serving stir hot puree slowly into hot cream sauce. Sprinkle with blue cheese and serve immediately. Serves 6.

Franks, Kraut

Frankfurters and sauerkraut are an old duet. For variation, season the kraut with brown sugar or caraway seed, a bit of diced raw potato or tart apple. Or at the last minute, fold a small amount of chili sauce into the kraut for serving delight with hot frankfurters.

Cereal And Milk Team

Breakfast cereal and milk work together to give you the important B vitamins. Two of these vitamins present in only small amounts in milk—niacin and thiamine—are generously offered by breakfast cereal. Another B vitamin, riboflavin, sparingly furnished by cereal, is richly furnished by milk. The cereal and milk also supplement each other to give you essential minerals, top quality protein, and quickly available food energy.

After-School Snack For Hungry Lads And Lasses

Fill up the cookie jar, mother, and let hungry youngsters eat their fill when they troop home from school. The apple sauce cookies are particularly good for children because they are not too rich, not too sweet. They won't spoil appetites for supper. Yet they have an apple flavor children like; and they are extra nutritious because they are made with apple sauce. The apple sauce that comes in cans or jars was used —for several reasons. It's quick and convenient, and always ready to use. Also—a big point—only the freshest of fresh apples ever get into canned apple sauce.

Along with the cookies serve chilled apple juice. Spicy, and delicious, and healthful, the children will go for it in a big way — especially if they can sip it through straws, from tall glasses. In fact, it's a good idea to keep several cans or bottles of apple juice always on hand in the refrigerator, for then thirsty young ones, and older ones, too) can help themselves any time.

Apple Sauce Cookies

½ cup shortening; 1 cup brown sugar; 1 egg; 1 cup seedless raisins; 2 cups sifted cake flour; ½ teaspoon baying soda; 2 teaspoons baking powder; ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg; 1 teaspoon cinnamon; ½ cup canned apple sauce.

California Fig-Peanut Tarts

The word dessert comes from the French term meaning "to clear the table", and this is exactly what we do before bringing on the last course of the meal.

California Fig-Peanut Tarts are truly worth clearing the table for. They are so good to eat that they will make the simplest, inexpensive menu a feast and the most elaborate party menu a culinary triumph.

California Fig-Peanut Tarts

1 cup dried figs
½ cup softened fortified margarine
1 cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
4 egg yolks
1 cup chopped salted peanuts
½ cup sherry, muscatel or white port wine
8 unbaked tart shells

Cover figs with boiling water; let stand 10 minutes; drain. Snip off stems and cut figs in small pieces with scissors. Cream margarine and sugar together until light and fluffy. Add salt and spices. Add unbeaten egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in figs and nuts. Add sherry; blend well. Spoon about ⅓ cup of the mixture into each tart shell. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 45 to 50 minutes, or until firm. Serve warm or cold, topped with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

Manpower-Shy Britain Recruits Labor In Italy

LONDON—(AP)—Britain is recruiting jobless Italians to help fill its manpower needs in its state-owned coal mines and railways.

By the end of the year, this country expects to have 1,000 Italians working underground in Britain's coal pits, and an equal number laboring on British railway rights-of-way.

These 2,000 Italians being brought here for work admittedly make only a small dent in Italy's problem of 2,000,000 jobless. But it's a help, however small, and both countries benefit.

Of the two programs, the recruiting of Italians for mine work is the more ambitious.

A special course of training has been set up for these workers. They are signed up in Italy on two-year contracts and brought to Britain in groups of 30 to 60 weekly.

After arrival they are sent to an English language training school at Maltby for 10 to 11 weeks. The aim there is to give them an everyday working knowledge of English, plus the familiarity with technical terms they will encounter in their work in the pits.

From the language school, the Italian recruits then go to at least three weeks of trainng in mining. In the pits they start work at the simplest jobs underground.

By early November just over 1,000 Italians had arrived in Britain for mine work. Some 400 of them have started work in the mines. The other 600 still are at the language school.

The use of Italian labor in the mines has run into opposition from some local units of the national union of mineworkers. So far the National Coal Board—which operates the government-owned mines—has avoided any open clash on the issue.

The Italian workers are sent only to pits where the leaders of the local union welcome them. This has been about one out of every five.

Coal board officials say objections of local unions to use of Italians stem from the depression days and mainly are based on the argument that Italian workers may some day affect the conditions of work and pay of British miners.

The coal board's reply is that Britain will need all of the coal it can produce and that the Italians must start at the lowest paid jobs. British miners now doing such work will move up to higher paid jobs.

Coal board officials say they have set no special quota of Italian miners. They would like to bring in an many as needed, if local unions will agree.

The project to bring in railway laborers from Italy began early in November with the arrival of 150. Some 850 more are expected before the end of the year.

The railways also have been hit by the country's tightening manpower situation.

The Italian workers will be used on unskilled laboring jobs, mainly as section hands. They are being given no language course or any special training. The government-owned railways are giving them basic instruction booklets in Italian and employes who speak Italian will work with the recruits.

Redskins Try Life Down On The Farm

By JACK LEFLER
AP Newsfeatures

FARM PROGRAMS are talked over by Indians on the Colorado River project where they are starting new lives.

PARKER, Ariz. — Navajo and Hopi Indians are moving off their homeland to a richer land with opportunity to build a self-sufficient future.

In years past, movements of Indians from their native domain by the federal government was a bitter and unhappy uprooting.

Ancestors of the Navajos, participating in this new exodus were rounded up by Kit Carson and herded off their bleak but beloved Northeastern Arizona lands in 1864. They were exiled to Bosque Redondo, N. M., until 1868, when they were allowed to return.

Since then the Navajos and the neighboring Hopis have struggled desperately to wrest a bare living from the wind-swept wastelands of their reservations. As erosion and over-grazing damaged the ranges and the Indian population grew, the situation of the tribesmen became more and more critical.

Their new landscape is the fertile Colorado River Valley, along the west-central edge of Arizona, some 300 miles from the Navajo and Hopi reservations.

The valley, along the home of the Mohave and Chemehuevi Indians has been opened to colonization by other tribes. Already more than 150 families, mostly Navajos and Hopis, have taken up farms and begun a new life. In adition, 110 Mohave and Chemehuevi families have been resettled on newly developed irrigated lands.

The Navajo is a shepherd. He lives a nomadic life on his 16 million-acre reservation, moving his flocks of sheep from one sparse range to another. He cultivates scraggly crops of corn, squash and beans in small patches scratched out of the dry, rocky ground.

Farming is more the way of life of the Hopis. At the base of their mesa-top homes, they grow crops—principally corn. Each August the Hopis dance with rattlesnakes in their mouths and send the reptiles, whom they call their little brothers, to the underground tribal gods with prayers for rain.

The United States Indian Service accepts applicants found to have the aptitude and desire for farm life. There is a long waiting list.

Each family gets 40 acres and $4,000 as a loan for equipment. In the valley seven cuttings of alfalfa hay a year and better than a bale of cotton per acre is normal. As soon as they are able, the Indians build their own modern homes.

After the initial assistance, the Indian colonist must stand on his own feet.

"The colonists are showing good ability," reported James M. Stewart, superintendent of the Colorado River Indian Agency. "The example of the Mohave Indians has helped a great deal. The Mohaves have been farmers for many years and have succeeded with little help from the government."

The colonists cultivated 12,815 acres this year. Of this total, 9,360 acres were in alfalfa, 2,105 in cotton, and 1,350 in pasture.

It was estimated the Indians would receive $625,000 from 25,000 tons of alfalfa, $368,375 from 2,105 bales of cotton, and $80,000 from sale of 500 head of cattle.

No longer will the Hopis have to dance with rattlesnakes in prayers for rain. Headgate Rock Dam across the Colorado River north of Parker impounds a great reservoir. Canals and ditches carry the water to the farmlands.

Land will be available for 100 more families this year. In all, an additional 75,000 acres could be cleared and placed under cultivation. This would provide farms for 1,375 families.

But even this, Stewart said, would make but a small dent in the dire situation of the Navajo Indians. There are 60,000 of them on their northern Arizona reservation.

Dr. Skitarelic Talks On Cancer

Dr. Benedict Skitarelic, local pathologist, spoke on cancer at the meeting of the Public Lay Health Council of Allegany County Tuesday in the headquarters of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children.

A question and answer period followed. Miss Mary Margaret Smith, R. N., presided. Mrs. Lawrence Cessna was elected vice chairman to fill the term of Mrs. Ernest Abernathy, who resigned.

Miss Smith named this program committee: Dr. Winter R. Frantz, city and county health officer; Miss Grace Hardman and Mrs. Perry Rosenmerkle, health nurses; Mrs. Harry Grimes, Mrs. Benjamin LaNeve, Mrs. Lester McGill and Mrs. Jennie Grahame.

The group decided to hold its annual Christmas party December 4 at 8 p. m. in the staff room of the Health Department in the Public Safety Building. Each member will bring a jingle gift, not to exceed 50 cents in value.

The committee in charge of the party will be Mrs. Lawrence Cessna, chairman; Miss Harman, Miss Smith, Mrs. Thomas Williamson and Mrs. Lester McGill.

The next meeting will be held in January.

Equity Case Filed

An equity case has been filed in Allegany County Circuit Court. The bill of complaint was titled Evelyn J. Ross vs. Robert A. Ross.

If Alaska or any other territory were to enter the Union as a state, a new star would become part of the official flag on the following Fourth of July.

Science Is Now Riding Herd On Lightning

By LAWRENCE N. ELDRED
AP Newsfeatures

CHICAGO — Lightning kills or injures 2,000 Americans every year, thunderstorms uncounted others. Destruction to property by these weather rampages is estimated up into the billions of dollars. Weather scientists are beginning to predict these losses may be largely eliminated within a few years.

They have only recently found out what a thunderstorm is.

Horace R. Byers, head of the Department of Meteorology at the University of Chicago, has become one of the world's foremost experts on lightning and thunderstorm electrictiy as director of the U. S. Government's Thunderstorm Project in 1946 and 1947.

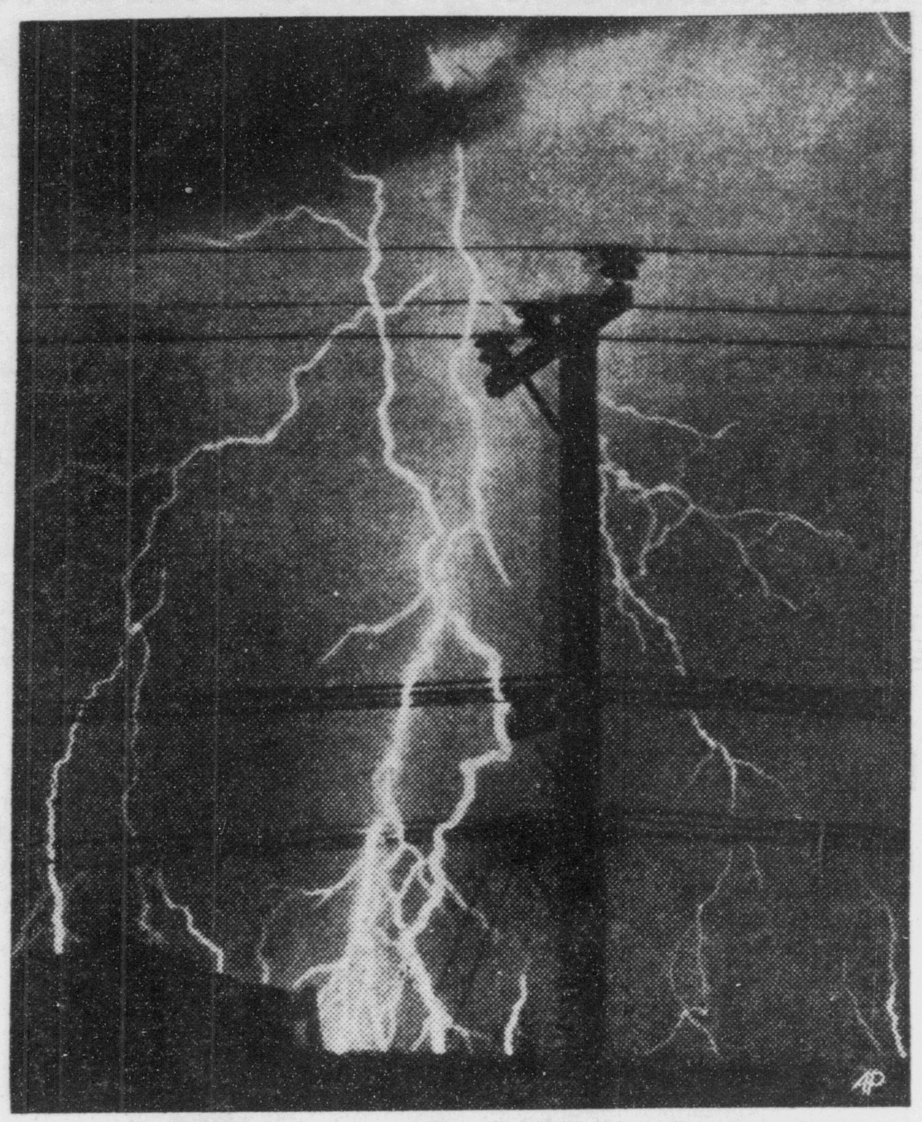
Scientists took a flock of F-61c "Black Widow" fighter planes, loaded them with sensitive instruments, and piloted them again and again through thunderstorms. They also sent up gigantic weather balloons. And on the ground they installed other types of equipment.

Benjamin Franklin, nearly two centuries ago (1752) discovered the electricity in lightning and invented the lightning rod. He also established that thunderstorms race across the country.

Today, while results of the recent project are still being digested and confirmed, Byers says weather scientists claim important discoveries.

For one thing that a thunderstorm is made up of a number of "cells," each with a definite pattern of development and its own life and death cycle.

Byers explained that thunderstorms result from either of two principal causes. The thermal type is formed by an uneven heating of the earth's surface creating swiftly rising warm air currents. The mechanical type results when a fast-moving cold air front wedges its way in under warm air, forcing the latter upward at a rapid rate.



LIGHTNING like this is perilous, on land and in the air.

Either way the updraft of air surges as high as five miles within 10 to 15 minutes. The cloud goes wild. Great turbulence develops. Winds at immense speeds — often up to 100 miles an hour — boil up and down in and out, and in a whirling motion within the cloud.

The warm air rises at around 60 miles an hour. As it rises it cools and the water vapor in it condenses rapidly.

By the time the vapor reaches the freezing level at 15,000 feet, sizable water drops have formed and these increase until they become too heavy to be carried by the updraft. As they fall toward earth they begin to melt and it is this melting action which scientists now think creates electrical charges.

Since the earth's surface normally carries a negative charge, a strong potential is built up between it and the positive charge in the cloud. This finally is relieved in lightning. The sudden splitting and expanding of the air creates the roar of thunder, while the thunderbolt itself may have struck anything or anybody in its path.

Finding out how the electrical charges are created is a second major recent discovery, Byers said.

And a third prime finding was the violent downward winds which cause so much blow damage when they reach the earth's surface.

When the cloud's moisture starts to fall in the form of snow, hail, or rain, it creates cold downdrafts from the frigid upper levels of the cloud. Gusts as high as 90 miles an hour may rush along the earth's surface.

This is the second, or mature, stage of the cell's development, At this stage the cloud top may have climbed to 60,000 feet; though many never reach above 30,000. The average is about 40,000. The cloud base, which may have been one or two miles across at the start only a few minutes earlier, swells to as much as six miles.

That stage lasts 15 to 30 minutes usually, and is the worst of the storm. The most rain falls, the most lightning flashes, and the gustiest surface winds blow in this period.

But then in another stage of the cell's life, lasting about another half hour or so, the cloud collapses and dissipates itself in weak downdrafts and light rain, or breaks up into layers of harmless clouds.

Byers noted that flying hazards in a thunderstorm area are extreme at 15,000 to 25,000 feet, the level favored by modern pressurized commercial airliners. Byers says safety lies in the use of radar, and he would have every commercial airliner so equipped.

As for ground level destruction, Byers says a network of radar stations could locate the storms a-brewing and—at least in the opinion of some scientists—swift planes or surface installations could quickly break them up.

Bombardment of the thunderhead with silver iodide salts—a method already credited by some with rain-making success — or ammonia or some other similar material is expected to become the method.

"We can't do entirely without lightning," Byers cautioned. "It is what maintains the earth's electrical balance and makes our long-range radio reception possible. But the amount of lightning needed to keep the proper balance is small, and it could be permitted to take place in less populated and less valuable areas."

Dr. Skitarelic Talks On Cancer

Dr. Benedict Skitarelic, local pathologist, spoke on cancer at the meeting of the Public Lay Health Council of Allegany County Tuesday in the headquarters of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children.

A question and answer period followed. Miss Mary Margaret Smith, R. N., presided. Mrs. Lawrence Cessna was elected vice chairman to fill the term of Mrs. Ernest Abernathy, who resigned.

Miss Smith named this program committee: Dr. Winter R. Frantz, city and county health officer; Miss Grace Hardman and Mrs. Perry Rosenmerkle, health nurses; Mrs. Harry Grimes, Mrs. Benjamin LaNeve, Mrs. Lester McGill and Mrs. Jennie Grahame.

The group decided to hold its annual Christmas party December 4 at 8 p. m. in the staff room of the Health Department in the Public Safety Building. Each member will bring a jingle gift, not to exceed 50 cents in value.

The committee in charge of the party will be Mrs. Lawrence Cessna, chairman; Miss Harman, Miss Smith, Mrs. Thomas Williamson and Mrs. Lester McGill.

The next meeting will be held in January.

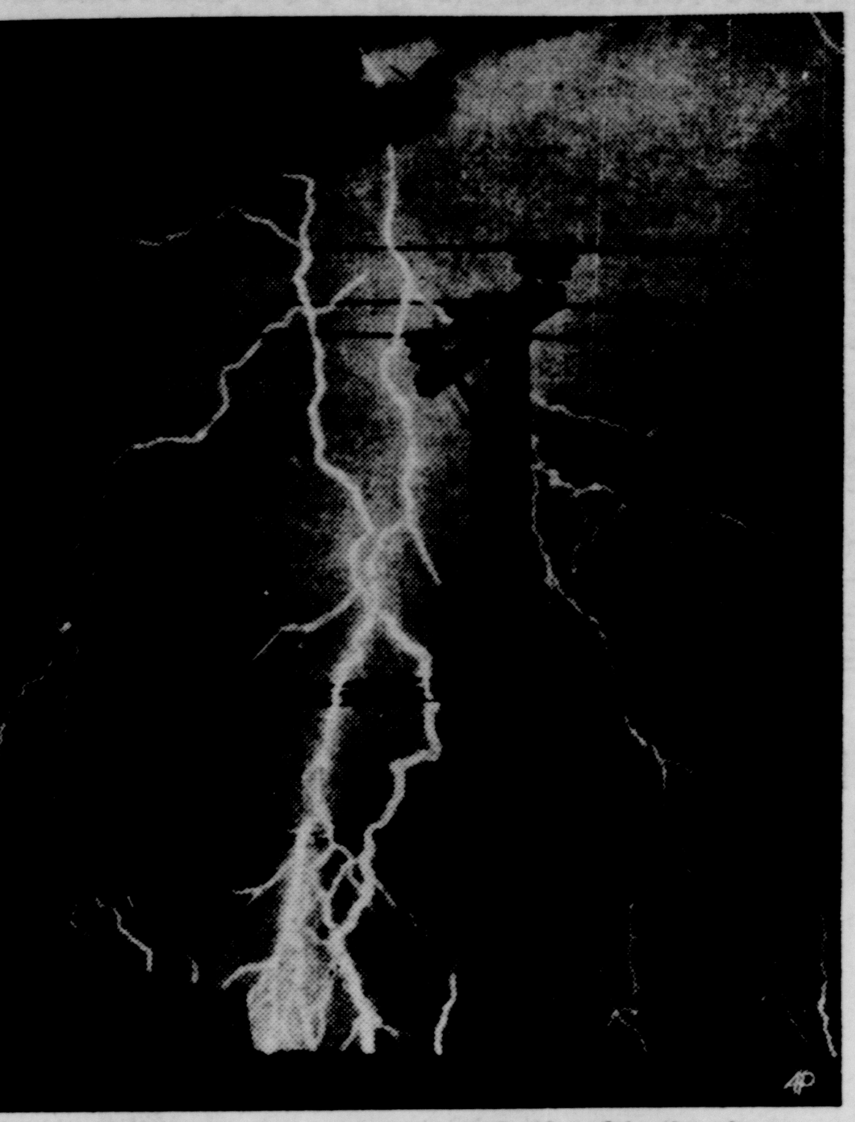
Equity Case Filed

An equity case has been filed in Allegany County Circuit Court. The bill of complaint was titled Evelyn J. Ross vs. Robert A. Ross.

If Alaska or any other territory were to enter the Union as a state, a new star would become part of the official flag on the following Fourth of July.

Science Is Now Riding Herd On Lightning

By LAWRENCE N. ELDRED
AP Newsfeatures



LIGHTNING like this is perilous, on land and in the air.

CHICAGO — Lightning kills or injures 2,000 Americans every year, thunderstorms uncounted others. Destruction to property by these weather rampages is estimated up into the billions of dollars. Weather scientists are beginning to predict these losses may be largely eliminated within a few years.

They have only recently found out what a thunderstorm is.

Horace R. Byers, head of the Department of Meteorology at the University of Chicago, has become one of the world's foremost experts on lightning and thunderstorm electrictiy as director of the U. S. Government's Thunderstorm Project in 1946 and 1947.

Scientists took a flock of F-61c "Black Widow" fighter planes, loaded them with sensitive instruments, and piloted them again and again through thunderstorms. They also sent up gigantic weather balloons. And on the ground they installed other types of equipment.

Benjamin Franklin, nearly two centuries ago (1752) discovered the electricity in lightning and invented the lightning rod. He also established that thunderstorms race across the country.

Today, while results of the recent project are still being digested and confirmed, Byers says weather scientists claim important discoveries.

For one thing that a thunderstorm is made up of a number of "cells," each with a definite pattern of development and its own life and death cycle.

Byers explained that thunderstorms result from either of two principal causes. The thermal type is formed by an uneven heating of the earth's surface creating swiftly rising warm air currents. The mechanical type results when a fast-moving cold air front wedges its way in under warm air, forcing the latter upward at a rapid rate.

Either way the updraft of air surges as high as five miles within 10 to 15 minutes. The cloud goes wild. Great turbulence develops. Winds at immense speeds — often up to 100 miles an hour — boil up and down in and out, and in a whirling motion within the cloud.

The warm air rises at around 60 miles an hour. As it rises it cools and the water vapor in it condenses rapidly.

By the time the vapor reaches the freezing level at 15,000 feet, sizable water drops have formed and these increase until they become too heavy to be carried by the updraft. As they fall toward earth they begin to melt and it is this melting action which scientists now think creates electrical charges.

Since the earth's surface normally carries a negative charge, a strong potential is built up between it and the positive charge in the cloud. This finally is relieved in lightning. The sudden splitting and expanding of the air creates the roar of thunder, while the thunderbolt itself may have struck anything or anybody in its path.

Finding out how the electrical charges are created is a second major recent discovery, Byers said.

And a third prime finding was the violent downward winds which cause so much blow damage when they reach the earth's surface.

When the cloud's moisture starts to fall in the form of snow, hail, or rain, it creates cold downdrafts from the frigid upper levels of the cloud. Gusts as high as 90 miles an hour may rush along the earth's surface.

This is the second, or mature, stage of the cell's development. At this stage the cloud top may have climbed to 60,000 feet; though many never reach above 30,000. The average is about 40,000. The cloud base, which may have been one or two miles across at the start only a few minutes earlier, swells to as much as six miles.

That stage lasts 15 to 30 minutes usually, and is the worst of the storm. The most rain falls, the most lightning flashes, and the gustiest surface winds blow in this period.

But then in another stage of the cell's life, lasting about another half hour or so, the cloud collapses and dissipates itself in weak downdrafts and light rain, or breaks up into layers of harmless clouds.

Byers noted that flying hazards in a thunderstorm area are extreme at 15,000 to 25,000 feet, the level favored by modern pressurized commercial airliners. Byers says safety lies in the use of radar, and he would have every commercial airliner so equipped.

As for ground level destruction, Byers says a network of radar stations could locate the storms a-brewing and—at least in the opinion of some scientists—swift planes or surface installations could quickly break them up.

Bombardment of the thunderhead with silver iodide salts—a method already credited by some with rain-making success — or ammonia or some other similar material is expected to become the method.

"We can't do entirely without lightning," Byers cautioned. "It is what maintains the earth's electrical balance and makes our long-range radio reception possible. But the amount of lightning needed to keep the proper balance is small, and it could be permitted to take place in less populated and less valuable areas."

Engineers Name Board Members

Six new members of the executive board of the Engineers Club of Cumberland were elected Wednesday night at the Cumberland Country Club.

They are W. D. Bartlett and C. H. Wolfe from the Amcelle plant of Celanese Corporation; C. L. Herath and W. E. Toms, from the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant here; John Coughenour, of Tri-State Mine and Mill Supply, and Alvin H. Wilson, of the George F. Hazelwood Construction Company.

They will serve for two years. Six other two-year directors have terms of one year to serve before the next election.

The speaker was E. A. Murray, manager of the Buffalo, N. Y., works of the Compressor Division of the Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation, who illustrated with slides his talk on compressors.

During the dinner, the Allegany High School Choir sang.

Church To Observe Membership Sunday

Membership Sunday will be observed Sunday at the 11 a. m. service in McKendree Methodist Church, according to Rev. George A. Tate, pastor.

Rev. Tate said that as a result of the Lay Visitation Evangelism Week in October, 15 persons became interested in joining the church.

He said members of the congregation worked in teams of two, visited homes in the community and informed the occupants of the advantages of church membership.

Today at 8:30 p. m. in the church's social hall a fellowship night will be held in honor of the new members. They will be welcomed by the congregation, which will discuss with them the responsibilities of church membership.

Church Plans Special Thanksgiving Service

A special Thanksgiving service, open to the public, is announced by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Cumberland for 11 a. m. Thanksgiving Day in the church on Washington Street

Expressions of praise and thanksgiving to God will be read from the Bible and also from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, in a special lesson-sermon entitled "Thanksgiving."

The latter portion of the service will be devoted to voluntary expressions of gratitude by members of the congregation.

Hoey Will Speak At Welfare Forum

HAGERSTOWN, (AP)—Public Welfare directors from throughout Western Maryland will gather here Monday for the annual regional meeting of the Maryland State Conference on Social Welfare.

Speakers will include Dr. Louis M. Krause, professor of clinical medicine at the University of Maryland; Joseph P. Folkoff, executive director of the Levindale Hebrew Home in Baltimore, and Edmund F. Hoey, director of recreation in Cumberland.

Fort Hill-Allegany Game Broadcast Approved

The Allegany County Board of Education Wednesday afternoon gave its approval for the radio broadcast Thanksgiving Day of the football game between Fort Hill and Allegany High Schools.

Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp said that opponents of the broadcast believe it might keep a good part of the crowd away. He added that the decision to permit the broadcast was based on the opinion that those persons who cannot get to the game deservedly should have the opportunity to hear it by radio.

Two stations, WCUM and WDYK, will be permitted to carry the broadcast.

Sewage May Be Dumped Into River Until Proven Harmful

Cumberland may continue to dump sewage into the Potomac River until the State Health Department proves that such an act is "prejudicial to public health."

The city is operating under a 1914 permit from the State Board of Health, and according to Dr. Robert H. Riley, department director, it must be proven that someone has been made ill by sewage discharge before the permit would be revoked.

Such a permit takes precedence over orders of the Water Pollution Control Commission which in June, 1950, ordered Cumberland to set up a sewage disposal plant within 18 months to treat the raw sewage. This waste dumps into the same Potomac flow that eventually becomes the source of drinking water for Hagerstown and the nation's Capital.

Plans Progress

Now almost 18 months later, Cumberland still has no sewage disposal plant although a bond issue to finance such a facility is to appear on the ballot next spring.

"It's sort of a backhanded way to have to stimulate some action," Paul W. McKee, commission director, said. "After this commission started to investigate, the health department ordered Cumberland to get busy on plans for a sewage disposal plant. Salisbury also acted after the commission began to talk to city officials there."

Dr. Riley admitted the problem of overlapping jurisdiction existed, but he said that he did not think the pollution commission was equipped to take over issuance of the sewage permits to communities.

He pointed out that the health department is responsible for the sanitation of the collection of sewage within the community as well as its eventual disposal.

Taxes Considered

"Both functions should be considered in their proper perspective so as not to overtax the community financially," Dr. Riley said. He suggested that much could be accomplished through "education of a community," to its needs.

McKee suggested that the cases of Cumberland and Salisbury have shown that when the condition is investigated, plans toward correcting the evil usually follow.

Representatives of the pollution commission and the health department will meet in a closed session Monday to set up some way of reviewing the community permits still outstanding.

The sewage may not be prejudicial to public health, McKee pointed out, but in some cases it is very prejudicial to the use by livestock, industry and for recreation of the water in which it flows.

Demos Will Meet Monday ToNameCongressCandidate

Members of the Democratic State Central Committee of Allegany county have been invited to attend a meeting Monday in Hagerstown in an effort to select a candidate for the Sixth Congressional District behind whom all groups could rally.

William L. Wilson, Jr., chairman of the Allegany county group, said he intends to be at the session and several other members of the committee may also attend.

George P. Mahoney, of Baltimore, national Democratic committeeman for Maryland, has called the meeting of State Central Committee members from Allegany, Garrett, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery counties.

In a similar meeting called by Mahoney and held Wednesday night on the Eastern Shore, Democratic leaders failed to agree upon a candidate for the First Congressional District, but they're going to keep trying.

Another meeting of Shore State Central Committee members and legislators will be held Dec. 5 in a second effort to find a candidate behind whom all factions can rally.

National Committeeman Mahoney called in 42 party leaders Wednesday to lay the plans for unseating Rep. Edward T. Miller, the present Republican Congressman from the Eastern Shore district.

Mahoney's idea is that Miller will be a hard man to beat in any circumstances, and that Democratic chances will be much better if the party can avoid a factional fight in the primary.

Mahoney wanted the meeting to pick a candidate at once, but the politicos in attendance refused. Said Delegate E. Layton Riggin (D-Somerset):

"I doubt if we are qualified tonight.

"I daresay if we came out of here tonight with a candidate there would be at least six or seven independent candidates tomorrow. We need more time to think seriously about it.

"However, I agree with Mr. Mahoney that we will be mighty wise to eliminate factional fights."

States Senators Edward Turner of Queen Anne's county and Mason Shehan of Talbot; Herman Broomhall, Chestertown business man; Mayor Julius L. Tubman of Cambridge (Taubman said today he is a candidate); Emerson C. Harrington, Jr., of Dorchester county; Rex Taylor, former state's attorney of Wicomico county; Wicomico State's Attorney Hamilton Fox, and State Senator Omar D. Crothers, Jr., of Cecil county.

Turner told the meeting, "I am not a candidate—now." He added he would be happy to support any candidate eventually chosen.

Church To Observe Membership Sunday

Membership Sunday will be observed Sunday at the 11 a. m. service in McKendree Methodist Church, according to Rev. George A. Tate, pastor.

Rev. Tate said that as a result of the Lay Visitation Evangelism Week in October, 15 persons became interested in joining the church.

He said members of the congregation worked in teams of two, visited homes in the community and informed the occupants of the advantages of church membership.

Today at 8:30 p. m. in the church's social hall a fellowship night will be held in honor of the new members. They will be welcomed by the congregation, which will discuss with them the responsibilities of church membership.

Church Plans Special Thanksgiving Service

A special Thanksgiving service, open to the public, is announced by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Cumberland for 11 a. m. Thanksgiving Day in the church on Washington Street

Expressions of praise and thanksgiving to God will be read from the Bible and also from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy, in a special lesson-sermon entitled "Thanksgiving."

Hoey Will Speak At Welfare Forum

HAGERSTOWN, (AP)—Public Welfare directors from throughout Western Maryland will gather here Monday for the annual regional meeting of the Maryland State Conference on Social Welfare.

Speakers will include Dr. Louis M. Krause, professor of clinical medicine at the University of Maryland; Joseph P. Folkoff, executive director of the Levindale Hebrew Home in Baltimore, and Edmund F. Hoey, director of recreation in Cumberland.

Fort Hill-Allegany Game Broadcast Approved

The Allegany County Board of Education Wednesday afternoon gave its approval for the radio broadcast Thanksgiving Day of the football game between Fort Hill and Allegany High Schools.

Superintendent of Schools Charles L. Kopp said that opponents of the broadcast believe it might keep a good part of the crowd away. He added that the decision to permit the broadcast was based on the opinion that those persons who cannot get to the game deservedly should have the opportunity to hear it by radio.

Two stations, WCUM and WDYK, will be permitted to carry the broadcast.

Sewage May Be Dumped Into River Until Proven Harmful

Cumberland may continue to dump sewage into the Potomac River until the State Health Department proves that such an act is "prejudicial to public health."

The city is operating under a 1914 permit from the State Board of Health, and according to Dr. Robert H. Riley, department director, it must be proven that someone has been made ill by sewage discharge before the permit would be revoked.

Such a permit takes precedence over orders of the Water Pollution Control Commission which in June, 1950, ordered Cumberland to set up a sewage disposal plant within 18 months to treat the raw sewage. This waste dumps into the same Potomac flow that eventually becomes the source of drinking water for Hagerstown and the nation's Capital.

Plans Progress

Now almost 18 months later, Cumberland still has no sewage disposal plant although a bond issue to finance such a facility is to appear on the ballot next spring.

"It's sort of a backhanded way to have to stimulate some action," Paul W. McKee, commission director, said. "After this commission started to investigate, the health department ordered Cumberland to get busy on plans for a sewage disposal plant. Salisbury also acted after the commission began to talk to city officials there."

Dr. Riley admitted the problem of overlapping jurisdiction existed, but he said that he did not think the pollution commission was equipped to take over issuance of the sewage permits to communities.

He pointed out that the health department is responsible for the sanitation of the collection of sewage within the community as well as its eventual disposal.

Taxes Considered

"Both functions should be considered in their proper perspective so as not to overtax the community financially," Dr. Riley said. He suggested that much could be accomplished through "education of a community," to its needs.

McKee suggested that the cases of Cumberland and Salisbury have shown that when the condition is investigated, plans toward correcting the evil usually follow.

Representatives of the pollution commission and the health department will meet in a closed session Monday to set up some way of reviewing the community permits still outstanding.

The sewage may not be prejudicial to public health, McKee pointed out, but in some cases it is very prejudicial to the use by livestock, industry and for recreation of the water in which it flows.

Demos Will Meet Monday To Name Congress Candidate

Members of the Democratic State Central Committee of Allegany county have been invited to attend a meeting Monday in Hagerstown in an effort to select a candidate for the Sixth Congressional District behind whom all groups could rally.

William L. Wilson, Jr., chairman of the Allegany county group, said he intends to be at the session and several other members of the committee may also attend.

George P. Mahoney, of Baltimore, national Democratic committeeman for Maryland, has called the meeting of State Central Committee members from Allegany, Garrett, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery counties.

In a similar meeting called by Mahoney and held Wednesday night on the Eastern Shore, Democratic leaders failed to agree upon a candidate for the First Congressional District, but they're going to keep trying.

Another meeting of Shore State Central Committee members and legislators will be held Dec. 5 in a second effort to find a candidate behind whom all factions can rally.

National Committeeman Mahoney called in 42 party leaders Wednesday to lay the plans for unseating Rep. Edward T. Miller, the present Republican Congressman from the Eastern Shore district.

Mahoney's idea is that Miller will be a hard man to beat in any circumstances, and that Democratic chances will be much better if the party can avoid a factional fight in the primary.

Mahoney wanted the meeting to pick a candidate at once, but the politicos in attendance refused. Said Delegate E. Layton Riggin (D-Somerset):

"I doubt if we are qualified tonight.

"I daresay if we came out of here tonight with a candidate there would be at least six or seven independent candidates tomorrow. We need more time to think seriously about it.

"However, I agree with Mr. Mahoney that we will be mighty wise to eliminate factional fights."

States Senators Edward Turner of Queen Anne's county and Mason Shehan of Talbot; Herman Broomhall, Chestertown business man; Mayor Julius L. Tubman of Cambridge (Taubman said today he is a candidate); Emerson C. Harrington, Jr., of Dorchester county; Rex Taylor, former state's attorney of Wicomico county; Wicomico State's Attorney Hamilton Fox, and State Senator Omar D. Crothers, Jr., of Cecil county.

Turner told the meeting, "I am not a candidate—now." He added he would be happy to support any candidate eventually chosen.

FAO Food Project Makes Hay In Afghanistan Now

AFGHAN farmer learns to use scythe for his livestock.

By JAMES M. LONG
AP Newsfeatures

ROME — In Afghanistan they don't make hay.

That's because the Afghan farmer has only the crudest sort of hoe for cultivation—and no scythe at all for harvesting. As a result, Afghan livestock dies off at a wasteful rate during the severe winters.

That is why FAO, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations with headquarters here, has stepped in to teach the Afghan farmer how to hoe and how to mow.

It's all part of FAO's job of helping countries produce more food for a world that has not enough to eat.

In Asia one of the major undertakings has been the veterinary program of trying to bring animal diseases under control.

Officials at the FAO World Headquarters here say they now have found a "single shot" vaccine that stops rinderpest, the cattle disease, and another that prevents newcastle disease of poultry.

Work is progressing in Britain toward a vaccine for hoof and mouth disease of cattle, but this has not yet proved fully successful because of the differing types of virus encountered in different countries.

There are other difficulties: in some Moslem countries farmers have refused to try the vaccines for fear they may contain alcohol—or even that alcohol may have been used in cleaning the syringes.

Colombia and Ecuador have a serious problem of soil erosion that is wasting farmlands by thousands of acres.

To bring new lands into use, the farmers have been cutting trees and farming higher and higher into the mountains. But within 10 years after cutting the trees, new erosion has ruined the lands.

FAO is trying to cope with this by regulated new forestation.

In Haiti, where fish is a low-cost and highly prized food, the Far Eastern technique of "fish farming" has been introduced.

The fish are being "planted in the island's numerous ponds and irrigation canals.

Pennsylvanian Back In Blood Donor Business

STROUDSBURG, Pa., (AP) — Jake Meckes is back in the blood donor business, proving once again that one man's bad fortune can be good news to somebody else.

The "somebody else," in this case, would be the soldiers fighting in Korea.

Meckes, 54-year-old employe of the New Jersey Zinc Co., has made so many trips to hospitals that he says he can't remember the exact number of times he has been tapped for blood.

It all started back in 1941 when Meckes began to complain of "feeling ill." At one time an operation was scheduled, but the condition disappeared and the operation was cancelled.

Some time later, when Meckes became ill again, a doctor told him:

"You have too much blood. That's your whole trouble." He recalls that the doctor explained it this way:

"Some people are born with extra fingers or toes. You evidently have something in your body that manufactures too much blood for you to use."

Then began the monthly visits to hospitals, with a pint of blood being tapped each time. For his blood bank donations — which were in addition to direct transfusions he gave neighbors and friends in need — he received the Red Cross silver star pin and was one pint short of a gold star when World War II ended.

The condition disappeared in 1948, and Meckes' donations were halted. But last May he became ill again, and before doctors performed a thyroid operation they found it necessary to remove two and one-half pints of blood.

Meckes now is on a special diet in an effort to curb the blood production but is continuing monthly trips to blood banks in hospitals either here or at nearby Palmerton or Bethlehem.

Life Is Lousy To Aged Clown Who Is Still On Laugh Trail

BY TOM STONE
AP Newsfeatures

FRANKFURT, Germany — Grock, the famous old European clown, is back on the sawdust trail.

After losing a fortune producing two films that didn't click, the Swiss - born comedian got out of show business — but only temporarily. The movie-making ventures almost broke him, but not his spirit.

Now he has his own circus and is once again touring Europe, where for almost half a century he has been an entertainment favorite.

His admirers, old and young alike, think Grock is the funniest man in the world. But behind the curtain, minus the grease paint, Grock is a tired, bent old man. Grock is 71.

But he still packs them in. When he stumbles out under the spotlight in his baggy coat and pants, the applause is deafening.

He trips and falls and picks himself up again, humiliation written on his face. He sits on a chair. It collapses.

GROCK . . . "Life is Lousy."

Not long ago he was asked why he wanted to burden himself with such a strenuous task at his age.

Grock replied:

"Life is lousy. Most of the old clowns are dead and there are few young ones. Almost everythting has gone to hell. I want to make people laugh."

He does.

Designer Steering Women Toward Higher Waistlines

PARIS (INS) — Elsa Schiaparelli, who for years has helped women along the road to elegance, today is steering them toward higher waistlines.

The Italian-born Parisian designer favors high waistlines for both daytime and evening. This season she is providing the gadgets necessary to put the waistline where she wants it.

One of these devices is a corselet belt in sequin-embroidered leather. Another is an inset corselet, accented by contrasting materials or colors.

Still other ways and means of lifting the waist are embroideres and draped or tucked effects which start where the waistline really is and rise to the bosom.

Skirts are both full and straight. Schiaparelli's casual suits are in the classic style and strikingly simple. Jackets are shorter than those of last season and may be either loose or fitting. Woolen jackets have satin collars, combining two contrasting tints.

There are coats for every type of figure. They are still of thve pyramid type but less full than previously. Sleeves are draped at the wrist or have a cut-off effect at the shoulders. Collars are flat and medium size. Linings may be in a contrasting color or in some unusual material.

Long and short evening coats in satin or felt are cut the same way but show a series of vivid colors.

Blouses, generally in jersey, are important fashion items and are draped and tucked to give the new high-waisted line.

Cocktail frocks have a strapless, low decollete but are always completed by matching boleros. Cotton-velvet dresses are a new fashion rage and are glamorous both in color and cut. These dresses are embroidered with sequins or combine two contrasting colors. Skirts are either full or narrow and neither trend predominates.

Wool fabrics have been used lavishly for formal dresses. Broadcloth and velvet are combined in one two-piece ensemble. A narrow, figure-molding black dress in velvet with red satin touches is a new version of the bi-colored look. This dress, with a high-placed satin belt in front, has an entire satin top at the back.

Bows appear frequently and give novel back effects when fixed, like angel wings, beneath the shoulders.

Among the hats, embroidered berets evoking the headgear of Italian peasants are made in velvet or felt. Of course, there is never a Schiaparelli collection without a freak — and this time it is a hat shaped like an angled chimney-flue.

All "Schiap" hats have a backward look and forward tilted hats are out as far as this collection is concerned.

New 'Electronic Detective' Aids Cosmic Ray Research

One of the unsolved mysteries of our time is cosmic radiation, full knowledge of which will help man to rocket into space. In the following article, International News Service Staff Correspondent Jack Geiger describes what scientists are doing to make these space flights a reality before the end of the century.

By JACK GEIGER

MINNEAPOLIS—(INS)—A team of scientists from the University of Minnesota sent a new "electronic detective" aloft in a balloon to help count the birthdays of mysterious cosmic rays.

Earlier versions of the device already have yielded evidence that some of the puzzling radiations are more than ten million years old.

That, in turn, helps fix their origin—long a mystery to astronomers and physicists—at reaches of the universe that stagger the imagination. In every second of those 10 million years the rays have traveled 186,000 miles.

The indications are that many of the cosmic rays have traveled from other galaxies, huge masses of stars similar to our own milky way, beyond the reach of all but the most powerful telescopes.

The real significance of the Minnesota experiments, however, is in a new cosmic "scintillation counter" that reacts in special ways to tiny traces of the cosmic radiation 100,000 feet above earth and telemeters the information back to the scientists.

The scintillation counter acts like an electronic detective. It contains a special material that scintillates or flashes every time radiation particles pass through it—but the flashes vary with the atomic weight of different particles.

The different "flash intensities" are turned into varying voltages which are radioed from balloons down to earth. Each voltage strength corresponds to a different atomic number—in other words, to a different chemical element.

On earth, an electronic calculator separates and counts the voltages, and comes up with a total for the number of particles of different kinds up at the 100,000-foot level where the balloon floats.

The Minnesota scientists are interested in the totals for particles of lithium, boron and beryllium—for these three elements are produced when heavy cosmic-ray particles collide with protons in interstellar space. They are not produced by radiation from the sun or relatively nearby stars.

A high count for lithium, boron or beryllium means the cosmic rays have been involved in a great many proton collisions, since the scientists know there is about one proton in every cubic centimeter of space, they can calculate how far the rays have traveled. The farther they travel, the older they are.

Prof. Edward P. Ney, head of the Minnesota research team, said it may be possible to flash the scintillation counter's voltage responses on the screen of a cathode-ray tube and set up a camera to film a continuous record.

That would make the entire detection, sorting and calculating process electronic. The scientists could go home for supper, get a good night's sleep—and arrive in the laboratory next morning to find a complete record of the intervening 12 hours' activity.

15 British Tars Reluctantly Leave U. S. Jail After Settling "Beef"

RICHMOND, Calif., Nov. 14 (AP)—Fifteen British seamen reluctantly left the Richmond jail — and its fine chow — after settling their "beef" with the skipper of the freighter Tacoma Star.

"We don't care if we ever leave this place," the sailors said. "We never had it so good."

They had just polished off servings of fried eggs and country sausage when a representative of the British consulate informed them their release had been arranged.

The Tacoma Star, laden with cotton, lay at anchor in San Francisco Bay, 24 hours overdue on her sailings schedule for Liverpool. Her irate skipper, Capt. Frank Hambidge, was pretty unhappy about the situation but had cooled off considerably.

He was willing to forgive and forget the noisy commotion caused by the 15 seamen — a ruckus started when the captain tried to sail without a crewman who had dallied in a tavern.

The trouble started with Ian MacGibbon. He stayed overlong in a tavern and wasn't back on ship at sailing time.

The captain was going to sail without Ian. Fourteen friends of Ian protested.

They walked off ship and stayed on the dock. The captain did some quick figuring. Fifteen from his crew of 48 left him less than the number required to continue insurance coverage with Lloyd's of London. So the Tacoma Star remained in port. MacGibbon finally arrived, whooshed by his mateys and on board. Yells brought him back dockside.

The 15 then locked arms and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Richmond police were summoned and took the 15 off to jail while Captain Hambidge thought things over. It wasn't mutiny. They weren't on the high seas.

But the 15 were unwilling to go back—until promised they wouldn't be disciplined.

Highest city in the United States is Leadville, Col., which has an elevation of 10,190 feet.

Life Is Lousy To Aged Clown Who Is Still On Laugh Trail

BY TOM STONE
AP Newsfeatures

FRANKFURT, Germany—Grock, the famous old European clown, is back on the sawdust trail.

After losing a fortune producing two films that didn't click, the Swiss-born comedian got out of show business — but only temporarily. The movie-making ventures almost broke him, but not his spirit.

Now he has his own circus and is once again touring Europe, where for almost half a century he has been an entertainment favorite.

His admirers, old and young alike, think Grock is the funniest man in the world. But behind the curtain, minus the grease paint, Grock is a tired, bent old man. Grock is 71.

But he still packs them in. When he stumbles out under the spotlight in his baggy coat and pants, the applause is deafening.

He trips and falls and picks himself up again, humiliation written on his face. He sits on a chair. It collapses.

GROCK . . . "Life is Lousy."

Not long ago he was asked why he wanted to burden himself with such a strenuous task at his age.

Grock replied:

"Life is lousy. Most of the old clowns are dead and there are few young ones. Almost everythting has gone to hell. I want to make people laugh."

He does.

Designer Steering Women Toward Higher Waistlines

PARIS (INS) — Elsa Schiaparelli, who for years has helped women along the road to elegance, today is steering them toward higher waistlines.

The Italian-born Parisian designer favors high waistlines for both daytime and evening. This season she is providing the gadgets necessary to put the waistline where she wants it.

One of these devices is a corselet belt in sequin-embroidered leather. Another is an inset corselet, accented by contrasting materials or colors.

Still other ways and means of lifting the waist are embroideres and draped or tucked effects which start where the waistline really is and rise to the bosom.

Skirts are both full and straight. Schiaparelli's casual suits are in the classic style and strikingly simple. Jackets are shorter than those of last season and may be either loose or fitting. Woolen jackets have satin collars, combining two contrasting tints.

There are coats for every type of figure. They are still of thve pyramid type but less full than previously. Sleeves are draped at the wrist or have a cut-off effect at the shoulders. Collars are flat and medium size. Linings may be in a contrasting color or in some unusual material.

Long and short evening coats in satin or felt are cut the same way but show a series of vivid colors.

Blouses, generally in jersey, are important fashion items and are draped and tucked to give the new high-waisted line.

Cocktail frocks have a strapless, low decollete but are always completed by matching boleros. Cotton-velvet dresses are a new fashion rage and are glamorous both in color and cut. These dresses are embroidered with sequins or combine two contrasting colors. Skirts are either full or narrow and neither trend predominates.

Wool fabrics have been used lavishly for formal dresses. Broadcloth and velvet are combined in one two-piece ensemble. A narrow, figure-molding black dress in velvet with red satin touches is a new version of the bi-colored look. This dress, with a high-placed satin belt in front, has an entire satin top at the back.

Bows appear frequently and give novel back effects when fixed, like angel wings, beneath the shoulders.

Among the hats, embroidered berets evoking the headgear of Italian peasants are made in velvet or felt. Of course, there is never a Schiaparelli collection without a freak — and this time it is a hat shaped like an angled chimney-flue.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

MONKEY IN GALA PARADE—Taking part in the mammoth balloon parade here November 26 at 7:30 p. m. will be Margo, the Monkey. A mile-long procession of giant balloons depicting fairytale characters will pass in review along Baltimore Street to thrill both young and old and will officially open the Christmas season in the Queen City. A feature of the evening's parade is a huge balloon pipe organ which will play appropriate Yuletide music.

Balloon Parade Route Outlined By Committee

November 26 Event Set For 7:30 P. M.

The route of the gigantic balloon parade November 26, marking the opening of the Christmas season in Cumberland, has been outlined, according to Charles E. Smith, chairman of the committee and Thomas F. Conlon, parade marshal.

Scheduled to get underway at 7:30 p. m., the mile-long procession will assemble at the State Armory, proceed to Union, to George to Baltimore Streets. After passing in review before thousands of holiday-spirited spectators along Baltimore Street, the parade will go up Centre to Market and down Mechanic to Baltimore Streets.

Again passing in review up Baltimore Street the mammoth parade will return down George Street and disband at Salem Street.

Sponsored by the Mercantile Bureau of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, the parade will have many features including the biggest balloon pipe organ in the world. More than 10 feet long and 15 feet high, the organ includes two 12 foot carolers, two animated organists and complete high-powered sound equipment. Favorite Christmas music will be played as the organ trundles along the parade route.

Also appearing in line of march to thrill both young and old will be Margo, the balloon monkey. See-Saw Sam and Sally, Major Mike the Maharajah, and many other fairytale characters to delight the bystanders.

In addition to the balloon characters will be colorful floats, bands and marching units. Work on lighting and street decorations will begin tomorrow and the gay Christmas lights will be turned on Thanksgiving night.

Ridgeley Man Returns

Wilton Kerns, 33, of Carpenter's Addition, Ridgeley, who was reported missing Sunday, has returned home.

Ridgeley Rent Board Holds Meeting Here

The Ridgeley Rent Advisory Board reviewed a number of recent actions taken by the local office regarding maximum rents at a meeting Wednesday night.

William Mickey, chairman of the board, and Thomas E. Barrett, director-attorney for the area, announced that all landlords of Ridgeley who seek to charge a rent higher than the August 29, 1949, ceiling must procure applications for increase from the Cumberland Rent Office, Room 201, Post Office Building. The forms may be requested by letter or phone call.

All tenants threatened with removal should contact the local office for advice as to whether their landlord has a legal ground for his action and whether the manner of notice is valid under the federal law.

Miss Elizabeth Lippold acted as secretary of the meeting.

Infirmary Head To Attend Meet

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Grim, this city, will attend the annual western regional conference of the Maryland State Conference of Social Welfare in Hagerstown on Monday at the Hotel Alexander.

School Menu Features Ham For Thanksgiving

Baked ham, with all the trimmings, will be the Thanksgiving bill of fare for the students of Allegany county public schools who eat in cafeterias.

W. D. Cooper, supervisor of cafeterias for the Board of Education said the lunch will be served Tuesday, the last full day before the holiday recess.

The ham will be supplemented by parslied potato or baked corn pudding, moulded cranberry salad, roll, milk and fruit or ice cream.

To fill this bill, the Board of Education lunch officials have ordered a ton and a quarter of top grade ham.

It may be a disappointment to some that turkey is not being served, but that treat will be offered on the last full day of school before the Christmas holidays, Cooper added.

No species of birds now living have teeth.

Condemnation Action Filed By Attorney

The Allegany County Board of Education through its attorney, William L. Wilson, Jr., yesterday morning docketed condemnation proceedings against the Maryland Fuel Company in an effort to obtain 4.7 acres of land needed in connection with the construction of a new high school at Lonaconing.

The petition states that the school building construction work is underway and it has developed that certain other property owned by the coal company adjacent to the school land is needed for the proper development of the site.

It is stated the Board of Education has attempted to purchase the property at what it deems to be a fair price, but has been unable to agree with the defendant company on the value of the property. The school officials seek only the surface rights.

Seventy-two percent of the earth's surface is water.

ON THE LINE

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK.—(INS)—Last year $120,000,000 was spent by the federal government and private agencies for the care of the blind in this country. But less than a million was spent on research to determine the causes, treatments and perhaps cures of the bewildering diseases which cause the loss of sight.

Only about one half of the people in the nation have perfect eyesight. About 30,000 go blind each year, maintaining and ever increasing a blind population which is now greater than 300,000. Another 300,000 Americans are seriously handicapped visually, and a recent survey showed that an appalling 800,000 may be unsuspecting victims of a most insidious eye disease—glaucoma—which can cause complete blindness without warning.

The extension of the life expectancy in this country has, as one of its debits, the increased expectancy of eye trouble—though it is not necessarily a disease of the elderly. The only way to combat the whole woeful and (in its rehabilitation stage) costly trouble is to engage in an aggressive research program such as is being carried on in heart, cancer and polio.

The hardest-working and certainly the liveliest eye research charitable organization is the National Council to Combat Blindness, Inc., founded a few years ago (with $8) by a remarkable young Brooklyn girl named Mildred Weisenfeld.

• — • — •

The girl lost her sight as a child, after an attack of measles. Her family sent her to some of the best domestic and foreign specialists to no avail. She has taken her battle for research funds to the President and to Congress, whose Rep. Percy Priest of Tennessee called her testimony "one of the finest and best-documented presentations I have ever heard."

From a zero start Miss Weisenfeld has lined up such adherents to her cause as Jim Farley, Fanny Hurst, Sen. James H. Duff, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Sen, Herbert Lehman, and Rhode Island's remarkable blind attorney general, W. E. Powers.

Her many friends in the theatrical and newspaper worlds are now helping her put on her huge annual show "Lights On," at Carnegie Hall Sunday night, with Miss Hurst, Bert Lytell, Ed Sullivan, Harry Hirschfield and Steve Allen as masters of ceremonies for an entertainment bill that will bring to that stage one of the year's best and biggest variety shows, with the inexhaustible Milton Berle as one of the countless fine acts.

James Keller, the Maryknoll priest, raises an arresting point in his new book "Government Is Your Business," (Doubleday).

"Our chief fault as individual citizens," Keller writes, "is that many of us have put aside our duty. 'Let George do it' seems to be the general attitude. It has become habitual and perhaps fashionable to disdain government as something beneath us. Many of us have dropped into the dangerous belief that others should make the sacrifices for good government while we do nothing more than sit on the sidelines and complain about how the doers are doing.

"Jack Johnson, the great negro heavyweight boxing champion, nailed the flaw in this attitude during his championship fight with Jess Willard 'way back in 1915. As the bout was being fought under Havana's blazing summer sun, a spectator at the ringside kept up a running fire of abuse at Johnson.

"He criticized John's style, his ancestry, his color, and finally his courage in the ring. Between rounds Johnson leaned over the ropes, and said, 'Man, you're down there talking. I'm up here fighting.' "

MERRY CHRISTMAS

MONKEY IN GALA PARADE—Taking part in the mammoth balloon parade here November 26 at 7:30 p. m. will be Margo, the Monkey. A mile-long procession of giant balloons depicting fairytale characters will pass in review along Baltimore Street to thrill both young and old and will officially open the Christmas season in the Queen City. A feature of the evening's parade is a huge balloon pipe organ which will play appropriate Yuletide music.

Balloon Parade Route Outlined By Committee

November 26 Event Set For 7:30 P. M.

The route of the gigantic balloon parade November 26, marking the opening of the Christmas season in Cumberland, has been outlined, according to Charles E. Smith, chairman of the committee and Thomas F. Conlon, parade marshal.

Scheduled to get underway at 7:30 p. m., the mile-long procession will assemble at the State Armory, proceed to Union, to George to Baltimore Streets. After passing in review before thousands of holiday-spirited spectators along Baltimore Street, the parade will go up Centre to Market and down Mechanic to Baltimore Streets.

Again passing in review up Baltimore Street the mammoth parade will return down George Street and disband at Salem Street.

Sponsored by the Mercantile Bureau of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, the parade will have many features including the biggest balloon pipe organ in the world. More than 10 feet long and 15 feet high, the organ includes two 12 foot carolers, two animated organists and complete high-powered sound equipment. Favorite Christmas music will be played as the organ trundles along the parade route.

Also appearing in line of march to thrill both young and old will be Margo, the balloon monkey. See-Saw Sam and Sally, Major Mike the Maharajah, and many other fairytale characters to delight the bystanders.

In addition to the balloon characters will be colorful floats, bands and marching units. Work on lighting and street decorations will begin tomorrow and the gay Christmas lights will be turned on Thanksgiving night.

Ridgeley Man Returns

Wilton Kerns, 33, of Carpenter's Addition, Ridgeley, who was reported missing Sunday, has returned home.

Ridgeley Rent Board Holds Meeting Here

The Ridgeley Rent Advisory Board reviewed a number of recent actions taken by the local office regarding maximum rents at a meeting Wednesday night.

William Mickey, chairman of the board, and Thomas E. Barrett, director-attorney for the area, announced that all landlords of Ridgeley who seek to charge a rent higher than the August 29, 1949, ceiling must procure applications for increase from the Cumberland Rent Office, Room 201, Post Office Building. The forms may be requested by letter or phone call.

All tenants threatened with removal should contact the local office for advice as to whether their landlord has a legal ground for his action and whether the manner of notice is valid under the federal law.

Miss Elizabeth Lippold acted as secretary of the meeting.

Shopping Day
WITH KAYE and RAE

We are starting something new in the Frostburg and Georges Creek Region to help all you shoppers. We have been doing the town looking for bargains, unusual and hard to get items and things in general that might interest you, which can be found among the merchandise offered by our friendly merchants.

★ ★ ★ ★

With cold winds blowing around the corner and "Old Man Winter" definitely on his way, our thoughts go to warmer wearing apparel. We stopped in at GRIFFITH'S of Frostburg the other day with an eye for winter clothing. She has a lot of new merchandise styled both to please and keep you warm this winter. Two of these lovely items are Challis Pajamas and Gowns, which were just received and beautiful new wool coats, prices from $49.98 up. Don't pass them up.

★ ★ ★ ★

Speaking of winter, brings to mind Christmas is not far away. Have you stopped in at CHARLIE HILL'S new Christmas store, 69 E. Main Street, who specializes in all kinds of Christmas toys for the youngsters? Both the HILL'S stores, his regular store, 26 W. Main Street, and his Christmas store, offer you a convenient lay-a-way plan with a small deposit. Visit him today and get some of his bargains.

★ ★ ★ ★

Shopping in the FROSTBURG DEPARTMENT STORE, we asked Mr. Karlowa where we could get some of those beautiful plastic snowballs and other decorations which they had on their store tree last year. He smiled and showed us a complete display of these decorations. Ladies, it's a brand new Christmas decoration idea. You've never seen anything like it—snowballs, snow flakes and canes made out of sparkling plastic foam. Start planning to decorate your tree today with the lovely, unique decorations for sale there.

★ ★ ★ ★

And Christmas brings on thoughts of plum puddings and fruit cakes. PRICE'S FOOD MARKET has a full line of fruit cake ingredients, everything from nuts to currants; in fact, Ladies, anything you would want to make a tasty, luscious fruit cake to please your husband and family. While you are there, be sure to ask for their strictly fresh country butter and eggs.

★ ★ ★ ★

That fruit cake reminds me of food, and food reminds me, Rae, that I had the most elegant dinner for only $1.25 last Sunday evening at the PRINCESS RESTAURANT. I really enjoyed the relaxing atmosphere of pleasant service, good food and music. Girls, why don't you suggest to your husbands, "Let's go out to dinner tonight, Honey, and dine at the PRINCESS"?

★ ★ ★ ★

And, Girls, if you're going out soon, better look to that hairdo. I stopped in at DOLLY'S BEAUTY SHOP, Tuesday night and got the "works." I'm telling you it made me feel ten years younger. With my new permanent, facial and manicure, I looked and felt like a new woman. And, after all, how we feel is mighty important. Rae says she has got an appointment for next week too.

★ ★ ★ ★

Have you had your fall and winter clothes pressed and cleaned, all ready to wear? And do you have your summer clothes all cleaned and put away? Better check and see. If not, call DEIST, CLEANERS & DYERS, Frostburg, for quick pick-up and delivery service. To look nifty and still be thrifty, call Frostburg 303 today.

★ ★ ★ ★

Shopping in the HOSKIN JEWELRY STORE, we saw a very unique advertising scheme, featuring their Community line of silver plate. On one of their shelves is a jig-saw puzzle with one piece missing. The store is mailing out rather extensively, letters containing one piece to the puzzle and if it fits the missing part, you will receive a 34-pc. service for 8, Community, Evening Star Pattern, silver set, valued at $53.75. If the piece does not fit, you will get a special reduction credit coupon toward any item in the store. If you are interested, stop in and you will be given one of these letters as long as the supply lasts.

CONDON'S SHOE STORE in Frostburg offers you, among its many items, Jumping Jack Shoes, which will 1. help your child walk straight, 2. help develop the foot and leg muscles, 3. prevent ankles from turning, 4. hold their shape, 5. provide proper flexibility and 6. give foot support. In the Oct. 23rd issue of LOOK Magazine, page 134, you can see the picture of these fine shoes in conjunction with an article on Dr. Benjamin Sprock, famous author of "Baby and Child Care."

★ ★ ★ ★

You know something, the only place in town that we could find the Playtex mitts with which we protect our hands while doing the dishes and scrubbing the floors was at FORD'S DRUG STORE in Frostburg. They have a complete display of the Playtex line. It includes baby pants, sizes small, medium and large, as advertised in LIFE Magazine. It will pay you to go in and shop around.

★ ★ ★ ★

BOETTNER AND BOETTNER, Frostburg, Insurance and Bonds, handle all lines of insurance. Anything you want insured—they can accommodate you—fire, furniture, accident and auto. By the way, Ladies, check your husband's car policy and see if he has complete accident insurance coverage, because winter is ahead and slippery roads lead to the possibility of accidents. Suggest to your husbands that they stop in and ask about complete coverage for your family car.

★ ★ ★ ★

Here's an item of interest to the husbands who are planning to build. You need expert workmanship, especially along electrical lines to insure safe and correct wiring for your new home. If you want it done correctly and without delay, call R. D. JOHNSON, 74 Ormond Street, Frostburg, Phone 332-J, today and ask Dick to give you an estimate.

★ ★ ★ ★

Well, Ladies, that about completes our shopping news for this week. Be looking for us next week, same place, same time, and until then, Happy Shopping!

Shopping Day
WITH KAYE and RAE

We are starting something new in the Frostburg and Georges Creek Region to help all you shoppers. We have been doing the town looking for bargains, unusual and hard to get items and things in general that might interest you, which can be found among the merchandise offered by our friendly merchants.

★ ★ ★ ★

With cold winds blowing around the corner and "Old Man Winter" definitely on his way, our thoughts go to warmer wearing apparel. We stopped in at GRIFFITH'S of Frostburg the other day with an eye for winter clothing. She has a lot of new merchandise styled both to please and keep you warm this winter. Two of these lovely items are Challis Pajamas and Gowns, which were just received and beautiful new wool coats, prices from $49.98 up. Don't pass them up.

★ ★ ★ ★

Speaking of winter, brings to mind Christmas is not far away. Have you stopped in at CHARLIE HILL'S new Christmas store, 69 E. Main Street, who specializes in all kinds of Christmas toys for the youngsters? Both the HILL'S stores, his regular store, 26 W. Main Street, and his Christmas store, offer you a convenient lay-a-way plan with a small deposit. Visit him today and get some of his bargains.

★ ★ ★ ★

Shopping in the FROSTBURG DEPARTMENT STORE, we asked Mr. Karlowa where we could get some of those beautiful plastic snowballs and other decorations which they had on their store tree last year. He smiled and showed us a complete display of these decorations. Ladies, it's a brand new Christmas decoration idea. You've never seen anything like it—snowballs, snow flakes and canes made out of sparkling plastic foam. Start planning to decorate your tree today with the lovely, unique decorations for sale there.

★ ★ ★ ★

And Christmas brings on thoughts of plum puddings and fruit cakes. PRICE'S FOOD MARKET has a full line of fruit cake ingredients, everything from nuts to currants; in fact, Ladies, anything you would want to make a tasty, luscious fruit cake to please your husband and family. While you are there, be sure to ask for their strictly fresh country butter and eggs.

★ ★ ★ ★

That fruit cake reminds me of food, and food reminds me, Rae, that I had the most elegant dinner for only $1.25 last Sunday evening at the PRINCESS RESTAURANT. I really enjoyed the relaxing atmosphere of pleasant service, good food and music. Girls, why don't you suggest to your husbands, "Let's go out to dinner tonight, Honey, and dine at the PRINCESS"?

★ ★ ★ ★

And, Girls, if you're going out soon, better look to that hairdo. I stopped in at DOLLY'S BEAUTY SHOP, Tuesday night and got the "works." I'm telling you it made me feel ten years younger. With my new permanent, facial and manicure, I looked and felt like a new woman. And, after all, how we feel is mighty important. Rae says she has got an appointment for next week too.

★ ★ ★ ★

Have you had your fall and winter clothes pressed and cleaned, all ready to wear? And do you have your summer clothes all cleaned and put away? Better check and see. If not, call DEIST, CLEANERS & DYERS, Frostburg, for quick pick-up and delivery service. To look nifty and still be thrifty, call Frostburg 303 today.

★ ★ ★ ★

Shopping in the HOSKIN JEWELRY STORE, we saw a very unique advertising scheme, featuring their Community line of silver plate. On one of their shelves is a jig-saw puzzle with one piece missing. The store is mailing out rather extensively, letters containing one piece to the puzzle and if it fits the missing part, you will receive a 34-pc. service for 8, Community, Evening Star Pattern, silver set, valued at $53.75. If the piece does not fit, you will get a special reduction credit coupon toward any item in the store. If you are interested, stop in and you will be given one of these letters as long as the supply lasts.

CONDON'S SHOE STORE in Frostburg offers you, among its many items, Jumping Jack Shoes, which will 1. help your child walk straight, 2. help develop the foot and leg muscles, 3. prevent ankles from turning, 4. hold their shape, 5. provide proper flexibility and 6. give foot support. In the Oct. 23rd issue of LOOK Magazine, page 134, you can see the picture of these fine shoes in conjunction with an article on Dr. Benjamin Sprock, famous author of "Baby and Child Care."

★ ★ ★ ★

You know something, the only place in town that we could find the Playtex mitts with which we protect our hands while doing the dishes and scrubbing the floors was at FORD'S DRUG STORE in Frostburg. They have a complete display of the Playtex line. It includes baby pants, sizes small, medium and large, as advertised in LIFE Magazine. It will pay you to go in and shop around.

★ ★ ★ ★

BOETTNER AND BOETTNER, Frostburg, Insurance and Bonds, handle all lines of insurance. Anything you want insured—they can accommodate you—fire, furniture, accident and auto. By the way, Ladies, check your husband's car policy and see if he has complete accident insurance coverage, because winter is ahead and slippery roads lead to the possibility of accidents. Suggest to your husbands that they stop in and ask about complete coverage for your family car.

★ ★ ★ ★

Here's an item of interest to the husbands who are planning to build. You need expert workmanship, especially along electrical lines to insure safe and correct wiring for your new home. If you want it done correctly and without delay, call R. D. JOHNSON, 74 Ormond Street, Frostburg, Phone 332-J, today and ask Dick to give you an estimate.

★ ★ ★ ★

Well, Ladies, that about completes our shopping news for this week. Be looking for us next week, same place, same time, and until then, Happy Shopping!

Court Denies One Claim In New Trial Move

Says B. Of L. E. Not Charity Body

KEYSER, W. Va.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is not a charitable organization, Judge Ernest A. See ruled yesterday in Mineral County Circuit Court.

Judge See's ruling came in a decision on one point of a motion for new trial of Francis M. Hamilton, Cumberland man recently convicted of soliciting business for a Philadelphia legal firm.

Hamilton has been convicted of asking Mrs. Virginia Miller to file suit through the law firm against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as the result of the death of her husband in the B&O's Cumberland yards.

During the trial, Hamilton not only denied contacting Mrs. Miller, but said he was acting in behalf of the B. of L. E., which he said helps widows of members and non-members.

Judge See ruled that he found "no basis for such evidence" in the brotherhood's constitution.

"In looking through the brotherhood constitution," wrote Judge See, "I find that the limitation (of aid to members) is definite. It is limited to the sum of $100 for a widow, and then only on a two-thirds vote of the brotherhood local, and this must be ratified by the grand lodge."

National officers of the B. of L. E. had introduced testimony at Hamilton's trial to show that the union is a charitable group.

Other testimony, however, showed that Miller had not been a member of the group or of any railroad union, and that his widow would therefore not have been entitled to aid.

Another point in Hamilton's new trial motion was the misbehavior of a juror in the case. The juror, Howard Henderson, Wiley Ford lumber salesman, admitted having gone to the B&O yards to probe further into the case, in violation of court instructions.

Henderson appeared yesterday to hear his sentence for contempt of court at the same session at which arguments on the new trial motion were heard.

In fining Henderson $5, Judge See told attorneys, "As I see the situation, this juror was checking to learn whether Mrs. Miller contacted Hamilton or if Hamilton contacted Mrs. Miller. Henderson went to see a B&O worker who delivered a contribution to Mrs. Miller.

"What Henderson did was open and above board. He told the workers in the yard in Cumberland his name and admitted being a juror in the Hamilton case. He didn't do anything intentionally wrong, although he violated the order of the court."

Defense Attorney H. G. Shores, following a bitter verbal clash with Prosecuting Attorney Donald C. Hott, filed a new brief to support the motion.

Judge See deferred his final ruling until next week, but set no definite date.

Other testimony, however, showed that Miller had not been a member of the group or of any railroad union, and that his widow would therefore not have been entitled to aid.

Another point in Hamilton's new trial motion was the misbehavior of a juror in the case. The juror, Howard Henderson, Wiley Ford lumber salesman, admitted having gone to the B&O yards to probe further into the case, in violation of court instructions.

Henderson appeared yesterday to hear his sentence for contempt of court at the same session at which arguments on the new trial motion were heard.

In fining Henderson $5, Judge See told attorneys, "As I see the situation, this juror was checking to learn whether Mrs. Miller contacted Hamilton or if Hamilton contacted Mrs. Miller. Henderson went to see a B&O worker who delivered a contribution to Mrs. Miller.

"What Henderson did was open and above board. He told the workers in the yard in Cumberland his name and admitted being a juror in the Hamilton case. He didn't do anything intentionally wrong, although he violated the order of the court."

Defense Attorney H. G. Shores, following a bitter verbal clash with Prosecuting Attorney Donald C. Hott, filed a new brief to support the motion.

Judge See deferred his final ruling until next week, but set no definite date.

The cost does not include auditorium, gymnasium and manual training shop, which will be authorized under a separate contract later. The general contractor is Lynch, Pugh and Corson, Morgantown, W. Va.

County Soil

legany County's farmers in the past 10 years have come to realize the importance of keeping their soil on the land and improving it whenever possible.

He noted yesterday that the first farmer to cooperate in the soil conservation program was Harvey, a 10-year veteran on the board. In the winter of 1941-42 he had the Soil Conservation Service work out a conservation plan to save soil and water on his land.

Today 489 Allegany County farms have a complete soil conservation plan and these arrangements involve 81,726 acres. Virtually half of the 975 farms are cooperating.

Fifty-four county farms have completed their plans by adopting all of the soil conservation measures suggested for their land.

One of the major soil conservation practices is contour strip cropping, considered essential in the hilly land typical of most of Allegany County. Some 3,641 acres are established in contour strip cropping.

The soil conservation experts also have let these farmers know that not all of their land is suitable for crops. Much of it is good for pasture land. A total of 5,374 acres is established in pasture improvement practices such as liming, fertilizing and managed grazing, which keeps the livestock off the pasture part of the time.

Gordon also noted that there are 15.2 miles of side hill ditches to carry off excess water, 859 acres of farm drainage, 10,556 acres established in crop rotation programs, 3,455 acres in perennial hay and 651 acres planted in trees. Thirty-two farms also are equipped with stock water ponds.

The soil conservationist could list some 30 different practices but those mentioned are enough to emphasize the scope of the program.

Crippled League Given $1,000 Check By Lions

The Lions Club yesterday presented a check for $1,000 to Miss Henrietta Schwarzenbach, president of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, for use in the general program of the organization.

For the past five years the club has been staging horse shows at Fairgo, and proceeds are turned over to the league to aid needy crippled children. The presentation was made by Arch M. Hutcheson, president of the club. Others present were William R. Carscaden, general secretary of the horse show; Clement C. May, Lions secretary, and A. E. Windish, past president of the local organization.

County Soil

legany County's farmers in the past 10 years have come to realize the importance of keeping their soil on the land and improving it whenever possible.

He noted yesterday that the first farmer to cooperate in the soil conservation program was Harvey, a 10-year veteran on the board. In the winter of 1941-42 he had the Soil Conservation Service work out a conservation plan to save soil and water on his land.

Today 489 Allegany County farms have a complete soil conservation plan and these arrangements involve 81,726 acres. Virtually half of the 975 farms are cooperating.

Fifty-four county farms have completed their plans by adopting all of the soil conservation measures suggested for their land.

One of the major soil conservation practices is contour strip cropping, considered essential in the hilly land typical of most of Allegany County. Some 3,641 acres are established in contour strip cropping.

The soil conservation experts also have let these farmers know that not all of their land is suitable for crops. Much of it is good for pasture land. A total of 5,374 acres is established in pasture improvement practices such as liming, fertilizing and managed grazing, which keeps the livestock off the pasture part of the time.

Gordon also noted that there are 15.2 miles of side hill ditches to carry off excess water, 859 acres of farm drainage, 10,556 acres established in crop rotation programs, 3,455 acres in perennial hay and 651 acres planted in trees. Thirty-two farms also are equipped with stock water ponds.

The soil conservationist could list some 30 different practices but those mentioned are enough to emphasize the scope of the program.

Crippled League Given $1,000 Check By Lions

The Lions Club yesterday presented a check for $1,000 to Miss Henrietta Schwarzenbach, president of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, for use in the general program of the organization.

Hutcheson, president of the club. Others present were William R. Carscaden, general secretary of the horse show; Clement C. May, Lions secretary, and A. E. Windish, past president of the local organization.

Gavilan, Cartier To Fight Dec. 14

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—(AP)—By signing Welter Champ Kid Gavilan of Havana and Walter Cartier on New York today for a non-title Dec. 14, the International Boxing Club has nilled most of its remaining Friday-TV dates on the Madison Square Garden 1951 schedule.

Al Weill, IBC matchmaker, still is looking for a Dec. 28 opponent for Gil Turner, sensational Philadelphia welterweight who knocked out Bernie Docusen Monday night.

After tomorrow's lightweight bout between Paddy Demarco of Brooklyn and Eddie Chavez of San Jose, Calif., the IBC shifts to heavyweights for the Nov. 23 date when Bob Baker, unbeaten Pittsburgh contender, meets Clarence Henry, highly-ranked Los Angeles fighter.

Manager Larry Shepherd of the Billings Club of the Pioneer League recently entered the magic circle of 20-game winners for the third consecutive season.

The average Michigan State gridder this season is 20 years 4 months old, stands six feet tall and weighs 193 pounds.

Long's Record Aging

By C. V. BURNS

A league that had its inception 23 years ago when William H. "Uncle Bill" Lewis was general secretary and Edwin Larrabee "Pappy" Kuhn was physical director launches its 24th consecutive campaign tomorrow.

It's the Central YMCA-Sunday School Basketball League and it has played a very important part in Cumberland's athletic history. Many a boy who got his start in the Sunday School league later graduated into the high school ranks and from there went on to star in collegiate circles. It's truly one of Cumberland's most worthwhile projects for juveniles.

For the second successive year 24 churches of Cumberland and vicinity will sponsor teams.

Six of the teams come from outside the city, namely, Ridgeley and Wiley Ford in West Virginia and LaVale, Potomac Park, Cresaptown and St. George's Episcopal Church of Mt .Savage, which, by the way was brought into the fold by the Rev. G. Stanley Schwind, who has had teams in the local circuit and the Tri-Towns loop in past years.

Grace Methodist has bagged more championships than any team in the loop—a total of seven. Centre Street Methodist, St. John's Lutheran and First Presbyterian are next in line with three titles each. St. Paul's English Lutheran and St. Luke's Lutheran have each won twice.

1930—St. Luke's
1931—Centre St.
1932—Centre St.
1933—Grace Meth.

LaSalle High School's gridiron engagement with Altoona Catholic in the Pennsylvania city tonight is the 10th of their series.

The Explorers have whipped the Marauders only once and that was in 1935 by the score of 14-3.

Scoreless ties were played in 1929 and 1940.

Altoona's six victories were as follows:

Allegany county's record kill was 201 in 1948.

Ed Athey, who is director of athletics at Washington College at Chestertown, Md., reports that Tom Kibler, is coming out of retirement to direct the college's revived baseball program next spring.

Kibler served on the athletic staff at Washington College for 35 years. He retired to enter the coal business with his brother at Chestertown.

Tom was "Bobby" Cavanaugh's football and basketball coach.

Howard Nesbit, Fort Hill graduate of 1940, who played on the Sentinel's baseball and basketball teams under Major Cavanaugh, is now soccer coach at Washington College. He will direct the track and field athletes in the spring.

Nesbit attended Frostburg State Teachers' College and Washington College.

Wonder if anybody's going to beat Johnny Long's W.M.I. League scoring record next year?

In 1924, Long, now Cumberland police and fire commissioner, banged in 52 points for Allegany in a 76-11 victory over Bruce. There were 23 field goals and six foul goals in 14 tries.

Scene of the shambles was Allegany County High School, then on Greene street.

That's not true about peach baskets being used at that time.

The Allegany County Men's Shuffleboard League is in its fifth season and the race promises to be a humdinger right down to the final day, April 3.

It's a Shaughnessy playoff this season with 14 teams battling for the four top spots.

The current pace setters, the Cumberland Knights of Columbus, won championships in 1948, 1949 and 1950. Stadium Inn of Frostburg captured top honors last season.

Approximately 140 players appear on the rosters of the league teams.

And nobody seems to be able to approach the league's all-time scoring mark of 49 credited to Charley Bujac III, of the Cumberland Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Other players in the league swear that Bujac must have been experimenting with an atomic weapon that night.

Didja know that Norman F. Geatz, Jr., is LaSalle High School's 13th football coach.

Art Slocum, John J. Long, George "Denny" Shay, Pat Conway, John Blough, "Peck" O'Neill, Harold Langton, Jack Plum, Ronald Palmer, Phil Minke, Jim Gaffney and Phil Carolan.

Each Team Permitted To Use One Pro Cager

The Central YMCA Senior Men's Basketball League met last night and changed its by-laws to allow only one professional player to participate with each team in the circuit for the 1951-52 season which gets under way December 3.

Article II was changed and is now worded as follows:

"Only one Cumberland pro player will be allowed to participate with each team in the league. In the event the pro team (Spas) is not in an organized league said players are still eligible to participate in our league."

League games will be played in 8-10-8-10 minute quarters.

Representatives of six teams attended last night's session. They were:

C. & P. Telephone Company—Walter Orndorff.

B.P.O. Elks—William Day.

Ridgeley Legion—Jim Phillips.

Cumberland Legion — George Zegles.

Forty And Eight—Eugene Hare.

Westernport Legion—John Keller.

The league will play a split season schedule with the winners of each half playing for the championship. The Forty and Eight won both halves last season.

Frederick Players Hunt Rabbits, 11 Suspended For Missing Drills

Brooks Cracks Down On Squad's Members

FREDERICK, Md., Nov. 15 (AP) — Four seniors and seven other players were suspended from Frederick High School's football squad by Coach Homer Brooks today because they went rabbit hunting instead of turning out for practice.

"If they'd rather go rabbit hunting," Brooks declared, "then it's time for them to trade in their football suit for a shotgun."

This was the first day of rabbit season in Maryland.

This leaves Brooks with a squad of only 23 players to meet Suitland High School at Maryland Park tomorrow at 2 p. m. But that didn't affect Brooks' action.

He said he might lift their suspensions for the last game of the season against Rockville High on Thanksgiving Day if they showed up for the rest of the practices.

One of the players suspended — Earl Houck—was co-captain. And with the other co-captain on the injured list, this left the team without a squad leader.

The other three seniors suspended are Ralph Brown, Howard Stup and John Kelly.

Schools Play Title Contest

Vinson And Sissonville Play For Class B Crown

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 15 (AP) — The men who oversee the fortunes of West Virginia's Class B football aristocracy—Sissonville and Huntington Vinson—today declared their forces mentally and physically ready to battle for the 1951 crown.

Challenger Sissonville will meet Vinson, wearer of the 1950 crown, on neutral ground at Milton tomorrow night. Kickoff time is 7:30.

Vinson appears a slight favorite by virtue of a tougher schedule, a better record and Sissonville's loss of its starting quarterback.

The coaches, both confident that their lads will give their best, aren't saying much. Coach Bob Hartley of Vinson said: "I don't want to say anything I'd have to take back."

And from Sissonville's Joe Sawyers: "we know Vinson's record is more impressive than ours. We know they're an awful good football team. To beat them we're going to have to be better than we've been at anytime this year."

On the record books, Vinson has won 10 straight this year without a defeat. Sissonville has dropped one contest in a nine-game schedule.

Sunday School Tilts Transferred From AHS To Fort Hill's Court

Opening games of the Central YMCA Sunday School League listed for the Allegany High court tomorrow have been transferred to the Fort Hill High School girls' gym, Clifton Van Roby, league secretary, announced last night.

Preparations are being made for the junior class dance at AHS and the gym has been decorated for the occasion.

Games shifted to Fort Hill are:

12:55—St. John's Lutheran vs. LaVale Methodist.
1:50—St. George Episcopal, Mt. Savage, vs. First Methodist.
2:45—St. Paul's Lutheran vs. Maccabees.
3:40—Grace Methodist vs. Centre Street Methodist.
4:35—Wiley Ford Holy Mission vs. First Brethren.

Gary And Beckley Battle For Title

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Nov. 15 (AP) —Two coaches of teams which played both Beckley and Gary this season picked Gary today to win the state class a scholastic football crown in Bluefield Saturday.

A third coach whose team faced both finalists, A. T. (Al) Howard of Bluefield Beaver, said, "if I had to choose a team I'd string along with Beckley. But it will be close."

Howard's team was defeated by Gary 39-0 early in the season, and then be at Beckley on Beaver's homecoming 13-0 late in the year.

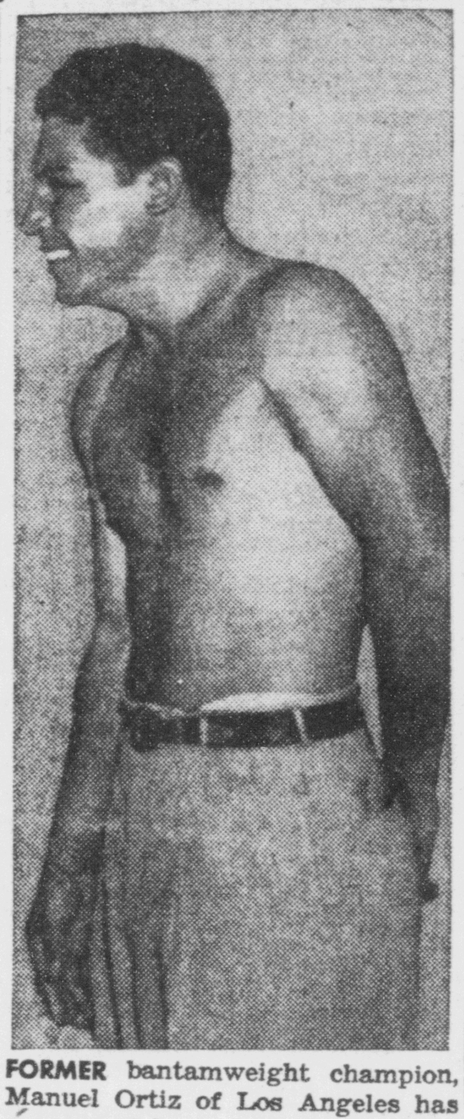
Gary and Beckley both also played Mullens and Princeton. By comparative scores, for what they mean, Gary has the edge. Gary and Beckley meet in Bluefield's Municipal Stadium Saturday at 2 p. m. in the title playoff.

Gary has a record 28-game winning streak to defend Saturday, and will be getting its first crack at state honors. The turn-out at the stadium here is expected to fill and perhaps overflow the 10,000 seats.

Bowl Team Picked

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 15 (AP) —Corn Bowl directors today chose the once-defeated Lewis College football team to appear in the annual Thanksgiving Day feature here.

The Lockport, Ill., squad's opponent probably will be selected tomorrow.



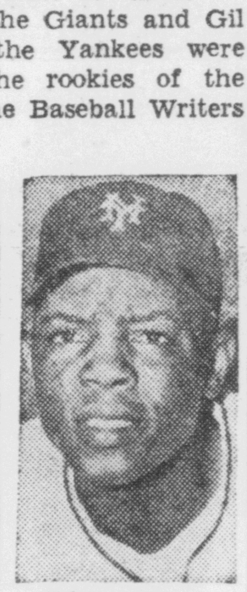
FORMER bantamweight champion, Manuel Ortiz of Los Angeles has announced he is retiring from the ring. Ortiz, now 35, won the 118-pound title in 1942 and lost it last year to Vic Toweel of South Africa. Ortiz has been fighting for 14 years. (International)

Gil McDougald, Mays Voted Top Rookies Of Year

Yankees' Infielder Just Edges Minoso

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (INS) — Willie Mays of the Giants and Gil McDougald of the Yankees were designated as the rookies of the year today by the Baseball Writers Association.

Gil McDougald



Willie Mays

While Mays took the National League award hands down, McDougald just squeezed by in a hectic ballot race with Orestes Minoso of the Chicago White Sox. The Yankee rookie got in by two votes, 13 to 11 .

Nichols Finishes Second

The selections were made by the same 24-man committee that chose the most valuable players in each league. Each vote counted a single point.

The 20-year-old Giants centerfielder received 18 votes to beat out lefty Chet Nichols of the Braves, who polled 4, and Clem Labine of the Dodgers, who received 2.

McDougald and Minoso were the only two American Leaguers to figure in the balloting. A strange twist in the rookie balloting was the fact that the same committee picked Minoso fourth in the MVP race while McDougald was ninth.

The 23-year-old McDougald, who led the world champions in batting with a .306 mark, thus received honors for the second year in a row. Before coming to the Bombers the young infielder was selected as the most valuable player in the Texas League.

Minoso was one of the top batsmen in the league with a .326 mark. The fleet Cuban led the league in stolen bases with 31 and in triples with 14.

Mays Big Factor

Mays came to the Giants in May and was a big factor in their sensational pennant triumph despite the fact that he began and ended in a batting "daze." Willie finished with a .274 average, and his adept fielding and strong throwing arm were two other attributes that stamped him for future greatness.

Nichols, a 21-year-old southpaw who demonstrated he is one of those "ice water" hurlers, had an 11-8 won and lost record with Boston.

Labine, who won 5 and lost 1 for the Dodgers after coming up late in the season, was one of their mound mainstays in the stretch. One of the criticisms of the way Charley Dressen handled the team in the stretch run was that the Dodger manager did not call on Labine enough.

Giants-Browns Vendetta To Be Renewed Sunday

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—There have been some notable rivalaries in the frenetic history of the National Football League, but few have blossomed so abruptly or with such pleasant violence as the Cleveland Browns-New York Giants vendetta.

The two clubs—which meet again Sunday in New York—never laid angry eyes on each other until last season, but their abbreviated exchange already has achieved the monumental proportions of a cash-and-carry Army-Navy or Yale-Harvard classic.

After four games, the Browns and Giants are all even in victories, and the series has been so close that the total margin of decision is only 16 points.

Moreover, in these days of astronomical scores, particularly in the pro circuit, the Giants have won by 6 to 0 and 17 to 13, the Browns by 8 to 3 and 14 to 13.

Sports Notes

By JOHN W. KNOWLTON

A group of notables were discussing Coach Bill Hahn's suggestion that Little League and Hot Stove League football teams be organized similar to the present baseball circuits following the all-sports banquet held by the city recreation department Wednesday night.

"Best idea I've heard in a long time," said one . . . . "Good thing, too," said another . . . . "Too much emphasis is placed on all other sports while football players never get taught the fundamentals of the game until they become high school age."

"If a smaller boys' football league were started, even a touch football league, it would teach the boys the game before they get to high school," one local coach remarked . . . . "Yes," another ardent fan put in, "and boys who are too small or young to play varsity ball come out for the high school team, don't get proper training because the coach doesn't have time to teach them fundamentals, lose interest and drop the sport. If they had fundamental training prior to reporting to the high school coach he could devote some of his time to them and make football players of them." . . . . "That's true," another chimed in, "and the proper training is all a boy needs to make the sport decidedly more safe to play, therefore less boys would be hurt."

Well, we agree with all those comments, and we are glad to note that the Catholic Youth Organization is a step in that direction, but as Coach Hahn stated, the movement has to be put on a larger over-all scale to increase the caliber of football in the area and give many deserving lads a chance.

Football as a whole teaches a boy fair play, good sportsmanship, how to be a winner—and a loser—how to be a gentleman and a contribution to his community . . . . It also affords many the only means of furthering their educations through scholarships in colleges throughout the nation . . . . But football is one of the most intricate sports to teach, more so than basketball and baseball, and it must be taught early if the youth is to benefit at all.

Ed Hoey, in accepting the acclaim accorded him at the banquet for his fine work in the recreation department the past two years, gave most of the credit to his able assistants, Helen Gilmore, secretary, and Ralph Thuss . . . . Helen, in particular, should be given a big boost for the work she has done . . . . Unlike most girls who would rather just watch a game and perhaps know very little about it, Helen really took her job seriously and is probably as well versed in sports as most men . . . . And you should see her with those little kids when they troop into the rec department office! . . . . Yes, many a bouquet can go to Helen for making Hoey's job the success it has been.

Coach Bob Pence is gradually expanding an excellent idea for charting the progress of his football players at Allegany High School . . . . He has each game charted, then makes a listing of what each player did during the game . . . . He has the boys competing with each other for recognition, noting who gains the most ground, which side of the line plays the best, who makes the pass interceptions, tackles on kickoffs and recovers fumbles, etc. . . . . And as each season draws to a close he adds more to his chart, thus someday hoping to be able to tell at a glance who the best player he ever had in performance was in every department of play, who made the most yardage, most long runs, most tackles, most everything . . . . It's really a complete system once he gets it set up.

George Long, diminutive center at Allegany, is leading his teammates in number of recovered fumbles, intercepted passes and kickoff tackles . . . . And for each one the prize is a free milkshake However those big malteds don't seem to be adding to his stature . . . . He still tips the scales around 135.

Gavilan, Cartier To Fight Dec. 14

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—(AP)—By signing Welter Champ Kid Gavilan of Havana and Walter Cartier on New York today for a non-title Dec. 14, the International Boxing Club has nilled most of its remaining Friday-TV dates on the Madison Square Garden 1951 schedule.

Al Weill, IBC matchmaker, still is looking for a Dec. 28 opponent for Gil Turner, sensational Philadelphia welterweight who knocked out Bernie Docusen Monday night.

After tomorrow's lightweight bout between Paddy Demarco of Brooklyn and Eddie Chavez of San Jose, Calif., the IBC shifts to heavyweights for the Nov. 23 date when Bob Baker, unbeaten Pittsburgh contender, meets Clarence Henry, highly-ranked Los Angeles fighter.

Manager Larry Shepherd of the Billings Club of the Pioneer League recently entered the magic circle of 20-game winners for the third consecutive season.

The average Michigan State gridder this season is 20 years 4 months old, stands six feet tall and weighs 193 pounds.

Long's Record Aging

By C. V. BURNS

A league that had its inception 23 years ago when William H. "Uncle Bill" Lewis was general secretary and Edwin Larrabee "Pappy" Kuhn was physical director launches its 24th consecutive campaign tomorrow.

It's the Central YMCA-Sunday School Basketball League and it has played a very important part in Cumberland's athletic history. Many a boy who got his start in the Sunday School league later graduated into the high school ranks and from there went on to star in collegiate circles. It's truly one of Cumberland's most worthwhile projects for juveniles.

For the second successive year 24 churches of Cumberland and vicinity will sponsor teams.

Six of the teams come from outside the city, namely, Ridgeley and Wiley Ford in West Virginia and LaVale, Potomac Park, Cresaptown and St. George's Episcopal Church of Mt .Savage, which, by the way was brought into the fold by the Rev. G. Stanley Schwind, who has had teams in the local circuit and the Tri-Towns loop in past years.

Grace Methodist has bagged more championships than any team in the loop—a total of seven. Centre Street Methodist, St. John's Lutheran and First Presbyterian are next in line with three titles each. St. Paul's English Lutheran and St. Luke's Lutheran have each won twice.

Here are the winners of past years:

1930—St. Luke's
1931—Centre St.
1932—Centre St.
1933—Grace Meth.

LaSalle High School's gridiron engagement with Altoona Catholic in the Pennsylvania city tonight is the 10th of their series.

The Explorers have whipped the Marauders only once and that was in 1935 by the score of 14-3.

Scoreless ties were played in 1929 and 1940.

Altoona's six victories were as follows:

The Allegany County Men's Shuffleboard League is in its fifth season and the race promises to be a humdinger right down to the final day, April 3.

It's a Shaughnessy playoff this season with 14 teams battling for the four top spots.

The current pace setters, the Cumberland Knights of Columbus, won championships in 1948, 1949 and 1950. Stadium Inn of Frostburg captured top honors last season.

Approximately 140 players appear on the rosters of the league teams.

And nobody seems to be able to approach the league's all-time scoring mark of 49 credited to Charley Bujac III, of the Cumberland Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Other players in the league swear that Bujac must have been experimenting with an atomic weapon that night.

Frederick Players Hunt Rabbits, 11 Suspended For Missing Drills

Brooks Cracks Down On Squad's Members

FREDERICK, Md., Nov. 15 (AP) — Four seniors and seven other players were suspended from Frederick High School's football squad by Coach Homer Brooks today because they went rabbit hunting instead of turning out for practice.

"If they'd rather go rabbit hunting," Brooks declared, "then it's time for them to trade in their football suit for a shotgun."

This was the first day of rabbit season in Maryland.

This leaves Brooks with a squad of only 23 players to meet Suitland High School at Maryland Park tomorrow at 2 p. m. But that didn't affect Brooks' action.

He said he might lift their suspensions for the last game of the season against Rockville High on Thanksgiving Day if they showed up for the rest of the practices.

One of the players suspended — Earl Houck—was co-captain. And with the other co-captain on the injured list, this left the team without a squad leader.

The other three seniors suspended are Ralph Brown, Howard Stup and John Kelly.

Vinson And Sissonville Play For Class B Crown

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 15 (AP) — The men who oversee the fortunes of West Virginia's Class B football aristocracy—Sissonville and Huntington Vinson—today declared their forces mentally and physically ready to battle for the 1951 crown.

Challenger Sissonville will meet Vinson, wearer of the 1950 crown, on neutral ground at Milton tomorrow night. Kickoff time is 7:30.

Vinson appears a slight favorite by virtue of a tougher schedule, a better record and Sissonville's loss of its starting quarterback.

The coaches, both confident that their lads will give their best, aren't saying much. Coach Bob Hartley of Vinson said: "I don't want to say anything I'd have to take back."

And from Sissonville's Joe Sawyers: "we know Vinson's record is more impressive than ours. We know they're an awful good football team. To beat them we're going to have to be better than we've been at anytime this year."

On the record books, Vinson has won 10 straight this year without a defeat. Sissonville has dropped one contest in a nine-game schedule.

12:55—St. John's Lutheran vs. LaVale Methodist.
1:50—St. George Episcopal, Mt. Savage, vs. First Methodist.

Gary And Beckley Battle For Title

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Nov. 15 (AP)—Two coaches of teams which played both Beckley and Gary this season picked Gary today to win the state class a scholastic football crown in Bluefield Saturday.

A third coach whose team faced both finalists, A. T. (Al) Howard of Bluefield Beaver, said, "if I had to choose a team I'd string along with Beckley. But it will be close."

Howard's team was defeated by Gary 39-0 early in the season, and then be at Beckley on Beaver's homecoming 13-0 late in the year.

Gary and Beckley both also played Mullens and Princeton. By comparative scores, for what they mean, Gary has the edge. Gary and Beckley meet in Bluefield's Municipal Stadium Saturday at 2 p. m. in the title playoff.

Gary has a record 28-game winning streak to defend Saturday, and will be getting its first crack at state honors. The turn-out at the stadium here is expected to fill and perhaps overflow the 10,000 seats.

Bowl Team Picked

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 15 (AP)—Corn Bowl directors today chose the once-defeated Lewis College football team to appear in the annual Thanksgiving Day feature here.

The Lockport, Ill., squad's opponent probably will be selected tomorrow.

Gil McDougald, Mays Voted Top Rookies Of Year

Yankees' Infielder Just Edges Minoso

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (INS) — Willie Mays of the Giants and Gil McDougald of the Yankees were designated as the rookies of the year today by the Baseball Writers Association.

Gil McDougald

Willie Mays

While Mays took the National League award hands down, McDougald just squeezed by in a hectic ballot race with Orestes Minoso of the Chicago White Sox. The Yankee rookie got in by two votes, 13 to 11 .

Nichols Finishes Second

The selections were made by the same 24-man committee that chose the most valuable players in each league. Each vote counted a single point.

The 20-year-old Giants centerfielder received 18 votes to beat out lefty Chet Nichols of the Braves, who polled 4, and Clem Labine of the Dodgers, who received 2.

McDougald and Minoso were the only two American Leaguers to figure in the balloting. A strange twist in the rookie balloting was the fact that the same committee picked Minoso fourth in the MVP race while McDougald was ninth.

The 23-year-old McDougald, who led the world champions in batting with a .306 mark, thus received honors for the second year in a row. Before coming to the Bombers the young infielder was selected as the most valuable player in the Texas League.

Minoso was one of the top batsmen in the league with a .326 mark. The fleet Cuban led the league in stolen bases with 31 and in triples with 14.

Mays Big Factor

Mays came to the Giants in May and was a big factor in their sensational pennant triumph despite the fact that he began and ended in a batting "daze." Willie finished with a .274 average, and his adept fielding and strong throwing arm were two other attributes that stamped him for future greatness.

Nichols, a 21-year-old southpaw who demonstrated he is one of those "ice water" hurlers, had an 11-8 won and lost record with Boston.

Labine, who won 5 and lost 1 for the Dodgers after coming up late in the season, was one of their mound mainstays in the stretch. One of the criticisms of the way Charley Dressen handled the team in the stretch run was that the Dodger manager did not call on Labine enough.

Giants-Browns Vendetta To Be Renewed Sunday

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—There have been some notable rivalaries in the frenetic history of the National Football League, but few have blossomed so abruptly or with such pleasant violence as the Cleveland Browns-New York Giants vendetta.

The two clubs—which meet again Sunday in New York—never laid angry eyes on each other until last season, but their abbreviated exchange already has achieved the monumental proportions of a cash-and-carry Army-Navy or Yale-Harvard classic.

After four games, the Browns and Giants are all even in victories, and the series has been so close that the total margin of decision is only 16 points.

Moreover, in these days of astronomical scores, particularly in the pro circuit, the Giants have won by 6 to 0 and 17 to 13, the Browns by 8 to 3 and 14 to 13.

Sports Notes

By JOHN W. KNOWLTON

A group of notables were discussing Coach Bill Hahn's suggestion that Little League and Hot Stove League football teams be organized similar to the present baseball circuits following the all-sports banquet held by the city recreation department Wednesday night.

"Best idea I've heard in a long time," said one . . . . "Good thing, too," said another . . . . "Too much emphasis is placed on all other sports while football players never get taught the fundamentals of the game until they become high school age."

"If a smaller boys' football league were started, even a touch football league, it would teach the boys the game before they get to high school," one local coach remarked . . . . "Yes," another ardent fan put in, "and boys who are too small or young to play varsity ball come out for the high school team, don't get proper training because the coach doesn't have time to teach them fundamentals, lose interest and drop the sport. If they had fundamental training prior to reporting to the high school coach he could devote some of his time to them and make football players of them." . . . . "That's true," another chimed in, "and the proper training is all a boy needs to make the sport decidedly more safe to play, therefore less boys would be hurt."

Well, we agree with all those comments, and we are glad to note that the Catholic Youth Organization is a step in that direction, but as Coach Hahn stated, the movement has to be put on a larger over-all scale to increase the caliber of football in the area and give many deserving lads a chance.

Football as a whole teaches a boy fair play, good sportsmanship, how to be a winner—and a loser—how to be a gentleman and a contribution to his community . . . . It also affords many the only means of furthering their educations through scholarships in colleges throughout the nation . . . . But football is one of the most intricate sports to teach, more so than basketball and baseball, and it must be taught early if the youth is to benefit at all.

Ed Hoey, in accepting the acclaim accorded him at the banquet for his fine work in the recreation department the past two years, gave most of the credit to his able assistants, Helen Gilmore, secretary, and Ralph Thuss . . . . Helen, in particular, should be given a big boost for the work she has done . . . . Unlike most girls who would rather just watch a game and perhaps know very little about it, Helen really took her job seriously and is probably as well versed in sports as most men . . . . And you should see her with those little kids when they troop into the rec department office! . . . . Yes, many a bouquet can go to Helen for making Hoey's job the success it has been.

Coach Bob Pence is gradually expanding an excellent idea for charting the progress of his football players at Allegany High School . . . . He has each game charted, then makes a listing of what each player did during the game . . . . He has the boys competing with each other for recognition, noting who gains the most ground, which side of the line plays the best, who makes the pass interceptions, tackles on kickoffs and recovers fumbles, etc. . . . . And as each season draws to a close he adds more to his chart, thus someday hoping to be able to tell at a glance who the best player he ever had in performance was in every department of play, who made the most yardage, most long runs, most tackles, most everything . . . . It's really a complete system once he gets it set up.

George Long, diminutive center at Allegany, is leading his teammates in number of recovered fumbles, intercepted passes and kickoff tackles . . . . And for each one the prize is a free milkshake However those big malteds don't seem to be adding to his stature . . . . He still tips the scales around 135.

It's smart to switch to Calvert
Calvert Reserve

They look alike...
but which whiskey really tastes better?

DON'T GUESS—TEST!

Be your own whiskey expert! Whiskies differ greatly in flavor and in freedom from harshness. So why not be your own judge by comparing Calvert with any other brand?

We believe you'll choose smoother, mellower Calvert Reserve, because its taste is determined by a "Consumer Jury" of thousands of folks like you.

But if you still prefer another brand, then stick with it. Fair enough?

MAKE THIS SHOWDOWN TEST TODAY:

Ask a friend or barman to pour ¼ oz. of Calvert into a glass, and the same amount of any other whiskey into another—without telling you which is which. Compare each one for smoothness and freedom from bite. Then pick the whiskey that really tastes better.

Calvert Challenges Comparison with any whiskey on the market!

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (INS)—Two of the leading fight referees in the country today are Ruby Goldstein and Ray Miller, two lightweights noted for their terrific punching ability 20 years ago.

In their fighting days both were merciless finishers once they got an opponent on Woozy street. But age has mellowed them and now they are quicker than any to save a beaten fighter from taking needless punishment.

Both had a crack at Jimmy McLarnin, the former welter champion, but with far different results. McLarnin knocked out Goldstein in two rounds. But Miller holds the distinction of being the only fighter who ever knocked out McLarnin.

Neither Goldstein nor Miller saw anything funny in their fighting days. Fighting was a grim, gruesome business then. Now they get a few laughs.

But Miller wasn't laughing the night he refereed the featherweight title bout between Sandy Saddler and Willie Pep this past summer. He insists he took more punishment than the fighters in one of the dirtiest, foulest brawls ever seen.

Once he was knocked down and wound up with both fighters sprawled on top of him. Talking about it later, Ray said: "That was the first time I was on the deck in 20 years."

Goldstein refereed the recent title fight between Ray Robinson and Randy Turpin and Miller handled the Elkins Brothers-Aaron Wilson semi-final.

Brothers was taking a terrific beating around the head. So at the end of one round Miller went over to see what shape the fighter was in and he asked the usual stock question—"Where Are You?"

Brothers grinned and replied: "Mr. Referee, I knows I is at the Polo Grounds. I also knows I is catching."

In the final round Brothers took the count resting on one knee and when his handlers asked him why he didn't get up, he said: "I can't count."

Another night Miller went over to the corner of a young fighter who had been taking a beating and when he asked the boy where he was, the boy snarled in disguest:

"I'm in my corner, you dope. Where do you think I am?"

"He was a fresh kid," said Miller, "but not half as fresh as I was the time I boxed Jack Dempsey a one-round exhibition on a stage.

"That was back in 1925 and Jack was heavyweight champ of the world and in his prime. Well, sir, I started in swinging with everything I had and I figured if I could land one on his whiskers I could knock him out.

"Jack naturally was surprised and he kept backing up before my furious attack and the theatre audience went wild. Finally, he got tired of it and swung a short left hook and when I woke up ten minutes later, Jack said: 'Sorry, kid, but I had to do it.'"

Ray Stevenson Will Replace Henderson As Terrors' Passer

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15—(AP)—A couple of home state lads could be the offensive stars in Saturday's season finale between undefeated Western Maryland and Johns Hopkins.

Ray Stevenson of Cumberland is due for a chance because of the injury of Harlow Henderson, Western Maryland's star passer.

Semler, says assistant coach Bruce Ferguson of Western Maryland, is the best left halfback he's seen this season. Which isn't hard to believe. The little junior has scored 10 touchdowns, more than any other college player in Maryland, and averaged 7.6 yards per carry.

The 165-pound Semler is a dangerous breakaway runner. He takes after his father, now athletic director at Hagerstown High and a former sports star at St. John's and Maryland.

Lions-Packers Game Will Be Televised

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Thanksgiving Day game between the Detroit Lions and Green Bay Packers in Detroit will be televised on a coast-to-coast hookup by the Dumont television network, it was announced here today.

Nick Kerbawy, Lions' publicity director, said the game starting at 12 noon in Briggs Stadium would be the only Turkey Day grid tv for football fans.

Five Horses Go Postward In Pimlico Special Today

Entry Of County Delight And Royal Governor Favored

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15 (AP)—The combination of County Delight and Eddie Arcaro was tabbed by the oddsmakers today as the probable favorite for tomorrow's 15th running of the Pimlico Special, America's sportiest horse race.

County Delight, bay four-year-old son of Count Fleet, will be coupled in the betting for the mile and three-sixteenths of the Maryland Jockey Club's glamor race with Royal Governor.

It is the only betting entry in the five-horse field.

With the entry listed at 8 to 5, largely because Eddie Arcaro will be aboard County Delight, the experts made Bryan G. a close second choice at 2 to 1.

The field is completed by Call Over, owned by the Bedford Stable of Albert Catteral, New Bedford, Mass., and Oil Capitol, joint property of A. E. Reuben, Toledo, Ohio, and Mrs. Harry Trotset, Louisville.

Arcaro has ridden four special winners, more than any other jockey. Of the 14 specials held, the favorite has won nine times. Two of the specials were walk-overs, with no betting at all. With the winner taking all of the $15,000 purse for this invitational race, there will be betting to win only—no place or show wagering.

No other rider tomorrow has won a special. Lois Cook will be aboard Oil Capitol if he starts, with Ovie Scurlock riding Bryan G., Carroll Bierman on Royal Governor, and Joe Culmone on Call Over.

Post time for the special is 4:17 p. m. (EST) and it will be the first thoroughbred race televised coast-to-coast. It will be on CBS tv starting at 4 p. m., and on CBS radio beginning at 4:15.

Judge To Sentence Fixers On Monday

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 —(AP)—General Sessions Judge Saul S. Streit today postponed until Monday the sentencing of basketball fixer, Salvatore T. Solazzo and of 14 players.

The 14 players pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy.

Judge Streit also postponed until Monday the pleading of Edward Gard, former Long Island University player, to an indictment charging bribery and conspiracy.

Saxony Is Winner As Racing Season Ends In New York

JAMAICA, L. I., Nov. 15 (AP) —Woolford Farms Saxony ended a long absence from the winners' circle when he splashed home in the $25,000 added Daingerfield Handicap, a searching test of two miles and a sixteenth, which drew 31,194 fans as the New York racing season ended today at Jamaica Race Track.

The 3-year-old son of War Jeep-Zaltowna closed stoutly in the final half mile to win by one length going away, with Mrs. H. P. Christiansen's Mandingo second and Ogden Phipps' Busanda, the early pacesetter, hanging on to take third money, another three quarters of a length back.

Frank A. Bonsal's Pilaster, the Maryland Cup champion, who was backed into even money favoritism, didn't have it in the climactic stages, finishing a tired fourth.

The victory, worth $21,250, was the third triumph in 23 races for Saxony, whose best previous effort was a second behind C. V. Whitney's Counterpoint, top eligible for "Horse Of The Year" in the Lawrence Realization.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 15—(INS)—After ten years off the screen, good looking Singer and Actor John Boles comes back in "Babes In Bagdad."

He should have the time of his life playing a modern sultan in a modern harem, especially with Paulette Goddard and Gypsy Rose Lee playing wives number one and two, in that order.

Paulette, who was supposed to return from Europe with Anita Loos, cancelled her tickets at the last minute so she could visit Erich Remarque, and so she could go to Barcelona and make this picture for Ed Danziger Productions.

John flies to New York today and goes by boat to Spain.

Things are just a-hummin' and a-hummin' at the Republic Studios. Ray Middleton, who took Ezio Pinza's place on Broadway in "South Pacific," has been signed by Herb (Papa) Yates for the story of Stephen Foster called "The Song Of Youth."

Alan had hoped to ge the canine star Ted "Sport" Morgan, but "Sport" is in "Top Banana" in New York, tied up for the run of the show.

This is probably the reason Pat changed her mind about doing a stage show and will remain here. She and Lewis Allen (who directed "Valentino") and Writer Walter Hackett have put together a package deal on a thriller called "Don't Kill Me." It's based on a recent newspaper story—they won't say which one.

• — • — •

When Yvonne De Carlo was making "Tomahawk" she was so smitten with Rock Hudson that she arranged for him to get a role.

Since then Rock can get his own roles because he's pretty important and he chooses now "The Searlet Angel" in which he will play opposite Yvonne.

Maybe they'll kiss and make up. They had a terrific battle on location with "Tomahawk" in South Dakota, but after all these months they'll probably forget their troubles.

Ilona Massey was squired to the opening of the Met in New York by Italian Explorer Dr. Pietro Mele, whose name has been associated with Anna Magnani in Rome.

Margaret Kerry, who is Charlie Ruggles' daughter in his TV show, eloped to Yuma, Arizona, and secretly married Richard N. Brown, former director of the show. They have been married since October 8.

Dolores Del Rio in New York from Mexico City is more beautiful than ever, I hear. Caroline Burke, NBC's only woman producer, gave a party in her honor and many people turned out both to see Dolores and a new painting Miss Burke has just acquired.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Answer: It is always psychologically dangerous to do anything that the religion in which you were brought up forbids because of the "guilt reaction" that is bound to follow. The reaction will be strongest if your faith forbids you to marry an unbeliever, but you will be provoked to some degree in any case by your mate's failure or refusal to accept your views of right and wrong or of what is and is not important. The divorce rate in mixed marriages is somewhat lower where one partner adopts the faith of the other, but is still considerably higher than where both have the same cultural and religious background.

Are there words we should stop using?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Maurice N. Walsh of the Mayo Clinic. Such ancient and obsolete terms as "epilepsy," "stroke," "apoplexy," "hysteria," "insanity," and "nervous breakdown" have outlived their usefulness and ought to be abandoned since they are not accurately descriptive, specific in meaning or even scientifically valid. They tend to create needless emotional bias in the minds of both physicians and patients, and the implication of incurability which they convey hampers the patient's chances of recovery as well as his feeling of security and his ability to adjust himself to other people.

Answer: They have already begun to do so. And while psychoanalyzing someone after he is dead is at best inspired guesswork, the guesses are often more convincing and illuminating than are those of a biographer who cannot go below the surface of his subject's emotional life. An example of what can be done in this field is the "psychosomatic biography" entitled "Mr. Carlyle—My Patient" in which a Scottish medical psychologist, James L. Halliday, interprets the emotional cause and effects on "the most famous stomach in literary history" of the "dypepsia" from which the author of "Sartor Resartus" suffered all his long life.

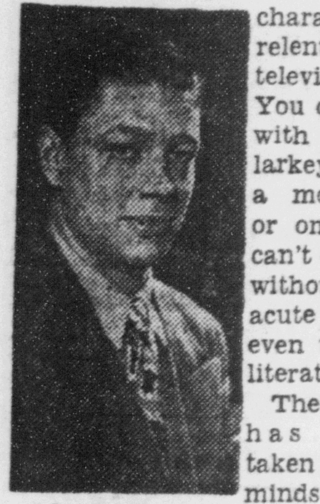
Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

Honesty Is The Best Policy

A good deal of honesty is creeping into television drama these days and—like the man said—it's the best policy. I know of nothing that searches out phoniness of plot or character quite so relentlessly as a television camera. You can get away with the old malarkey in front of a movie camera or on radio; you can't on television without causing acute pain to even the most illiterate observers.



John Crosby

The old precept has apparently taken root in the minds of the producers of Lux Video Theater which is one of the most improved programs on the air. When it started, Lux was eating fairly low on the ham, under the impression, I gather, that this fare was substantial enough for radio and that it jolly well was good enough for television. Well, it wasn't, and there has been considerable revision of opinion and a great elevation of taste on Lux this year.

One of the more recent Lux dramas was the story of a bank accountant whose irretrievable honesty proves a terrible embarrassment to his personal fortune and to his family. His implacable incorruptibility runs headlong into the general corruptibility of everyone else, including that of his wife, son and daughter, but eventually wins him social and financial redemption. In the process he loses all faith in his family and pretty much everything he had to live for.

While this finish would seem to unsettle the old adage about honesty, it somehow didn't. The bank accountant, beautifully played by Thomas Mitchell, was an imposing figure even in his final emotional torment and the effect of the drama, on the observer, a rare thing in television, was one of great moral uplift. There are so many scoundrels and thieves on television that an honest man, who achieves his victory over the dishonest without the use of gunfire, is an enormously interesting novelty.

The story, by Percival Wilde adapted by Max Shoub, is so essentially simple that I'm surprised it caught anyone's attention, simplicity pretty well eluding the producers of television these days.

Another fairly notable recent drama was the "Studio One" production of "The Hero," starring—of all people—the old magician and comedy dancer Paul Hartman. The story line here is considerably more complicated and elaborate, but the play maintained most of its integrity in spite of a little too much plot trickery at the end. "The Hero" (Mr. Hartman) is a man who had mowed down four armed bank bandits 35 years before the play opens. In consequence, the townsfolk of Amity Falls made him a living legend, gave him a house, supported him, and pretty much made a bum out of him.

Fairly early in the 35th year of this adulation, it becomes evident that Joshua Holcomb hadn't been such a hero after all, that he was actually trying to run away from the banditti and that the killings had been entirely an accident. By this time though, the town has quite a stake in its hero. No other town has one of its own and besides the town's leading industry is "Hero" breakfast food, each package of which bears a likeness of Mr. Holcomb.

There was quite a lot more to the story but the essential ingredient, implicit though never stated, is that a town needs its tradition even though based on badly garbled facts, that a 35-year-old hoax through sheer age acquires a certain respectability and even dignity. A good many history books, when you come right down to cases, are full of incidents of heroism which are no more valid that Mr. Holcomb's.

As an actor, Mr. Hartman has a few holes in his repertoire but he managed to make the part of an aging bore and fraud both ingratiating and charming, which was no small feat. "Studio One," out front for a long time among television dramatic shows, has had a few lapses—as haven't we all—but it still maintains a level of excellence which I find astonishing.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

EACH GUARD A SECTOR

IN LAND warfare, it is necessary to allot territory to units, so that one can protect one sector and another may guard a different part of the line. That principle applies with equal force to defense against a double squeeze play in bridge. Unless the work is properly divided between the two defenders, they may find the declarer putting the pressure first on one of them and then on the other.

North: ♠ A K 10 6 4 ♥ 8 7 6 ♦ K Q 4 3 ♣ 2

West: ♠ 3 2 ♥ Q 5 2 ♦ A 10 9 7 ♣ J 7 6 3

East: ♠ Q 9 5 ♥ J 10 9 3 ♦ J ♣ A Q 9 5 4

South: ♠ J 8 7 ♥ A K 4 ♦ 8 6 5 2 ♣ K 10 8

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	4 ♠

That was nice bidding by both partners, if you grant that slightly optimistic bidding pays in the long run. In this case it did, as the declarer's good play had to be abetted by a basic defensive mistake to give him his contract.

East selected his singleton diamond J for the opening, West winning with the A and returning the 10, the Q getting ruffed by the spade 5. East could find no better next play than his club A to make his side's book of three tricks, and then he led the club 5 to the K, which gave North a heart discard. Would you have done differently?

Anyway, North proceeded then to build a double squeeze, scoring the Spade A, K and J, heart A, diamond K and spade 6, bringing decisive discards from the defense. When North then laid down the final spade, the 10, he also held the heart 8 and diamond 4, with the heart K-4 and club 10 in dummy.

East, who had pared down to the heart J-10 and club Q, was distressed, as he had seen West's discards, including the club J. West actually had retained the heart Q-5 and diamond 10. Obliged to keep the club Q because he could see dummy's 10, East tossed the heart 10, whereupon North discarded the club 10. West now was squeezed between the heart Q-5 and diamond 10. Playing a heart would make the 4 good, and his diamond would make the diamond 4 good for North, which is what happened.

West was the culprit. Knowing he alone could guard against the last diamond, he should have held also his club J. That would have enabled East to keep his hearts and thus thwart the double squeeze.

Tomorrow's Problem

North: ♠ 9 ♥ Q J 9 7 4 2 ♦ Q J 9 5 2 ♣ Q

West: ♠ K 8 ♥ A K 10 5 3 ♦ None ♣ A 10 9 8 4 3

East: ♠ A 10 7 5 2 ♥ 8 6 ♦ None ♣ K J 7 6 5 2

South: ♠ Q J 6 4 3 ♥ None ♦ A K 10 8 7 6 4 3 ♣ None

(Dealer: North. North - South vulnerable.)

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Anyway, North proceeded then to build a double squeeze, scoring the Spade A, K and J, heart A, diamond K and spade 6, bringing decisive discards from the defense. When North then laid down the final spade, the 10, he also held the heart 8 and diamond 4, with the heart K-4 and club 10 in dummy.

East, who had pared down to the heart J-10 and club Q, was distressed, as he had seen West's discards, including the club J. West actually had retained the heart Q-5 and diamond 10. Obliged to keep the club Q because he could see dummy's 10, East tossed the heart 10, whereupon North discarded the club 10. West now was squeezed between the heart Q-5 and diamond 10. Playing a heart would make the 4 good, and his diamond would make the diamond 4 good for North, which is what happened.

West was the culprit. Knowing he alone could guard against the last diamond, he should have held also his club J. That would have enabled East to keep his hearts and thus thwart the double squeeze.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

F C P Z B W E F Q F R F Q B W J S I R J V M Q J W Q. B X U V P F F K K B R W I T J V M E Q W Z C J W Z P V K—I Q S O P V F.

IN THEIR CHICAGO HOME, the three children of Dr. and Mrs. Anthony S. Ippolito get the grim news that their parents were among the 20 killed in the crash of two Union Pacific trains at Evanston, Wyo. They are (l. to r.): Gregory, 2; Anthony Jr., 10, and Valarie, 8. (International)

Adult Example Is Blamed For Sex Preoccupation Of German Youth

FRANKFURT, Germany— (AP) — Eighty thousand "lost" youths are roaming West Germany. The war shattered their homes.

In their six postwar years they could have formed an underworld of crime. But statistics show that juvenile criminality in Germany has increased only slightly in comparison with the prewar rate.

"But sexual relations among German adolescents have increased alarmingly," reports Prof Hans Luxenburger, noted psychiatrist and director of the Munich Youth Office.

Under the German criminal code, the term "children" applies to persons less than 14 years old. They cannot be punished by the law because they are considered under the age of responsibility. But persons from 14 to 21 are referred to as juveniles and held accountable for their acts.

"Many people like to explain this immorality by Germany's critical housing shortage and bad living conditions," said the professor. "This is right only in part.

"The youth is being corrupted by bad films and bad literature. Betting, gambling, the hunger for excitement is growing.

"But above all there is the incredible indifference of the adults, caused by the thinking that 'the Russians will come anyway'."

Frankfurt Youth Judge Karl Heinz Dreysel adds another point:

"Denazification also has had some bad influence. I had a 15-year-old girl recently who admitted having earned money as a prostitute."

When Judge Dreysel reproached her father for neglecting his supervision over her, the father sighed:

"She always told me that we are living in a democracy and therefore she can do what she wants. When I tried to argue with her she told me that I, as a former Nazi, couldn't tell her anything."

About 65 per cent of all recorded sex offenses in Bavaria are reported to have been committed by juvenile offenders.

Youth Judge Dreysel said that about 80 per cent of the juvenile offenders he deals with come from homes broken by divorce or the death of a parent. But girls are only about 10 per cent of the cases.

The judge stressed that children of refugee families have a less than proportionate share in juvenile crimes.

Rails Gain In Otherwise Faltering Stock Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Rails stood out strongly today in an otherwise faltering market.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained only 10 cents at $96.30. The industrial component remained unchanged, rails were ahead 60 cents while utilities lost 10 cents.

Volume again was a small 1,200,000 shares as compared with 1,220,000 shares yesterday.

Texas Gulf Sulphur had rough going after directors declared an extra dividend of 75 cents and a regular of $1 bringing the 1951 total to $5.50, the same as a year ago. That obviously disappointed the trading fraternity. At the close the stock was down 2⅞ at 105.

Republic Aviation had the benefit of a higher dividend of 75 cents making it $1 for the year as against 50 cents last year. It closed 1¼ at 14⅞ while other aircrafts declined.

Copper Range went right ahead to a gain at the close of 1⅜ at 32⅜ after the Reconstruction Finance Corp. approved a loan of $57 million to develop a copper vein in Upper Michigan for an eventual annual production of 35,000 tons.

Laclede Gas was the day's most active issue unchanged at 8, and it was followed by Pan American World Airways off ⅛ at 11½, Standard Oil of Ohio off ⅜ at 41½, Graham-Paige up ⅛ at 3¼, and United Corp. up ⅛ at 5.

Higher stocks included Santa Fe up ¾ at 72, Chesapeake & Ohio ½ at 34¼, Southern Pacific 1⅜ at 61¼, Northern Pacific ⅜ at 54½, Standard Oil (NJ) ⅜ at 69¾, Eastman Kodak ¾ at 46⅝, and Superior Oil of California 10 at 535.

It Takes More Champagne To Fill Milady's Slipper Now Than In '31

ATLANTA, Ga. (INS)—It takes considerably more champagne to fill a pampered darling's slipper today, but one veteran shoe salesman thinks feminine feet are far more fetching now.

"But it is a smooth, pretty size 6½ foot unblemished by bunions or misshaped by fallen arches that plagued the girl who tried to cram a size seven into a smaller slipper."

Owings said that after years of hobbling around on aching ankles and twisted toes the ladies finally realized that correct fit and comfort are more of an aid to beauty than small feet.

The salesman, in Atlanta to attend the Southeastern Shoe Travelers Show in spring styles, explained:

"Much of the style of a shoe depends upon the fit. Also, comfort or the lack of it means the difference between a pleasing or a painful appearance."

Owings pointed out that the current emphasis on comfort in footwear is indicated in the mounting popularity of wedged shoes. He said:

He added, however, that it is difficult to foresee what women will continue to buy. Owings sighed:

"While the ladies are easier to fit, they are as hard to please as ever."

His Lucky Day

ALTHOUGH he fell five stories down a stairwell recently, little Louis Derosa appears none the worse for his experience as he sits up in bed in his New York home after a hospital check-up. Equally remarkable is the fact that Louis landed on a dog, and the animal was found to be merely stunned. (International)

Adult Example Is Blamed For Sex Preoccupation Of German Youth

FRANKFURT, Germany— (AP) — Eighty thousand "lost" youths are roaming West Germany. The war shattered their homes.

They are tramping from town to town doing petty work and sometimes engaging in small black market deals. Chances for regular employment are few.

In their six postwar years they could have formed an underworld of crime. But statistics show that juvenile criminality in Germany has increased only slightly in comparison with the prewar rate.

There is practically not a single case of juvenile drug addiction reported in West Germany's police files ,officials say.

"But sexual relations among German adolescents have increased alarmingly," reports Prof Hans Luxenburger, noted psychiatrist and director of the Munich Youth Office.

Under the German criminal code, the term "children" applies to persons less than 14 years old. They cannot be punished by the law because they are considered under the age of responsibility. But persons from 14 to 21 are referred to as juveniles and held accountable for their acts.

Prof. Luxenburger believes the growing sexual immorality of German youth "is mainly explained by the bad example of the adults."

"Many people like to explain this immorality by Germany's critical housing shortage and bad living conditions," said the professor. "This is right only in part.

"The youth is being corrupted by bad films and bad literature. Betting, gambling, the hunger for excitement is growing.

"But above all there is the incredible indifference of the adults, caused by the thinking that 'the Russians will come anyway'."

Frankfurt Youth Judge Karl Heinz Dreysel adds another point:

"Denazification also has had some bad influence. I had a 15-year-old girl recently who admitted having earned money as a prostitute."

When Judge Dreysel reproached her father for neglecting his supervision over her, the father sighed:

"She always told me that we are living in a democracy and therefore she can do what she wants. When I tried to argue with her she told me that I, as a former Nazi, couldn't tell her anything."

About 65 per cent of all recorded sex offenses in Bavaria are reported to have been committed by juvenile offenders.

Youth Judge Dreysel said that about 80 per cent of the juvenile offenders he deals with come from homes broken by divorce or the death of a parent. But girls are only about 10 per cent of the cases.

The judge stressed that children of refugee families have a less than proportionate share in juvenile crimes.

It Takes More Champagne To Fill Milady's Slipper Now Than In '31

ATLANTA, Ga. (INS)—It takes considerably more champagne to fill a pampered darling's slipper today, but one veteran shoe salesman thinks feminine feet are far more fetching now.

John Owings, St. Matthews, S. C., reports the average woman today years a size 1½ larger shoe than she did 20 years ago. He added:

"But it is a smooth, pretty size 6½ foot unblemished by bunions or misshaped by fallen arches that plagued the girl who tried to cram a size seven into a smaller slipper."

Owings said that after years of hobbling around on aching ankles and twisted toes the ladies finally realized that correct fit and comfort are more of an aid to beauty than small feet.

The salesman, in Atlanta to attend the Southeastern Shoe Travelers Show in spring styles, explained:

"Much of the style of a shoe depends upon the fit. Also, comfort or the lack of it means the difference between a pleasing or a painful appearance."

Owings pointed out that the current emphasis on comfort in footwear is indicated in the mounting popularity of wedged shoes. He said:

"They give the dressy appearance of high heels plus the comfort of flat shoes."

He added, however, that it is difficult to foresee what women will continue to buy. Owings sighed:

"While the ladies are easier to fit, they are as hard to please as ever."

Rails Gain In Otherwise Faltering Stock Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Rails stood out strongly today in an otherwise faltering market.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained only 10 cents at $96.30. The industrial component remained unchanged, rails were ahead 60 cents while utilities lost 10 cents.

Volume again was a small 1,200,000 shares as compared with 1,220,000 shares yesterday.

Texas Gulf Sulphur had rough going after directors declared an extra dividend of 75 cents and a regular of $1 bringing the 1951 total to $5.50, the same as a year ago. That obviously disappointed the trading fraternity. At the close the stock was down 2⅞ at 105.

Republic Aviation had the benefit of a higher dividend of 75 cents making it $1 for the year as against 50 cents last year. It closed 1¼ at 14⅞ while other aircrafts declined.

Copper Range went right ahead to a gain at the close of 1⅜ at 32⅜ after the Reconstruction Finance Corp. approved a loan of $57 million to develop a copper vein in Upper Michigan for an eventual annual production of 35,000 tons.

Laclede Gas was the day's most active issue unchanged at 8, and it was followed by Pan American World Airways off ⅛ at 11½, Standard Oil of Ohio off ⅜ at 41½, Graham-Paige up ⅛ at 3¼, and United Corp. up ⅛ at 5.

Higher stocks included Santa Fe up ¾ at 72, Chesapeake & Ohio ½ at 34¼, Southern Pacific 1⅜ at 61¼, Northern Pacific ⅜ at 54½, Standard Oil (NJ) ⅜ at 69¾, Eastman Kodak ¾ at 46⅝, and Superior Oil of California 10 at 535.

His Lucky Day

ALTHOUGH he fell five stories down a stairwell recently, little Louis Derosa appears none the worse for his experience as he sits up in bed in his New York home after a hospital check-up. Equally remarkable is the fact that Louis landed on a dog, and the animal was found to be merely stunned. (International)

Amvets Urge Use Of Atom Bomb In Korea

Would Withdraw All UN Troops

Robert F. Baker, commander of J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, said members reached unanimous agreement on the resolution after reading published reports of Red murders of some 5,400 American prisoners of war.

"Now that we know they have murdered more than 5,000 of our men," said Baker, "there's no point in hesitating to use the atom bomb."

Earlier yesterday, President Truman told reporters at his winter White House at Key West, Fla., that while he had received no official confirmation of published reports, he felt the murders to be the most uncivilized thing to happen in the last century.

Baker said the resolution would be drafted in the form of a letter to state Amvets headquarters for forwarding to national headquarters. He said it would bear his signature and that of James McFarlane, post adjutant.

Several months ago, former National Commander Harold Russell suggested much the same sort of retaliation against the Reds, but Baker said the local post was to the best of his knowledge the first to make a formal suggestion of this type.

William B. Orndorff, national executive committeeman, reported on the status of the current membership campaign.

Red Cross Home Nursing Courses Offered Public

Is Part Of Civil Defense Program

The step up in training will be in connection with the Civil Defense Department which has requested that 150,000 people receive training in taking care of the sick throughout the United States.

The Red Cross has been designated by the Civil Defense as the organization to teach home nursing in Allegany County.

The Allegany County Commissioners have given the Red Cross a room in the second floor of the Union Street County Building. This room will be used as a class room for teaching home nursing courses.

Mrs. Raymond Boare is chairman of the home nursing committee, and Mrs. L. J. Daum and Mrs. Grace Wallis are in charge of supplies.

Mrs. Witherup said there have been five home nursing classes taught in the county since last February in which 97 people received home nursing certificates.

Mrs. Witherup stated the Red Cross Chapter has had a number of requests for classes in home nursing. She said the step-up in instruction will be taught entirely by volunteers as in the past.

Classes will be open to the public. No fee will be charged for the instruction except for the cost of text books.

Mrs. Witherup said persons interested in taking the home nursing course may obtain full details by calling the Red Cross office at 4181 or contacting Mrs. Boare at 3168-J.

Old Newspapers Displayed At Cumberland Library

Consequently, despite the fact that this is National Book Week, Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian, has arranged an exhibit of old newspapers rather than books in the show case this week.

Historical Records

After all, Miss Walsh recalls, old newspapers are historical records just as much so as the history books.

Featured in the display is a copy of the Maryland Gazette, published in Annapolis June 17, 1794. Emphasizing the historical importance of this paper, Miss Walsh notes that it lists the names of officers in the Maryland Militia who were called out to quell the Whiskey Rebellion of that year. On that occasion George Washington, still president of the United States, donned his uniform for the last time and came to Cumberland to review the troops.

This same paper carries an anecdote on the French Revolution which was nearing its end at that time. It reports the names of three Frenchmen who died on the guillotine. "Two behaved with great fortitude but the latter showed great sign of weakness," the paper states.

Other Papers

Other papers in the display include The Columbian Chronicle, published in Georgetown, April 21, 1795; Centinel and Country Digest, published in Georgetown, June 23, 1797; National Intelligencer, published in Washington, April 4, 1803; Republican Advocate, published in Frederick, September 21, 1804; St. Mary's Beacon, published in Leonardtown, February 12, 1857; and the Cumberland Daily Times Carnival Souvenir, published October 6, 7 and 8, 1891.

Farmers Begin Plans For 1952 Conservation

Better Arrangements Urged By PMA

Allegany County farmers, like others all over Maryland, are looking ahead and planning their farming operations to make the best possible use of assistance to be provided under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program, according to Albert O'Neal, chairman of the Allegany County Production and Marketing Administration committee.

Through the Agricultural Conservation Program, the individual farmer and the nation are co-operating in a program of protecting and building the soil and water resources so that current defense needs can be met without reducing the land's productivity. In most instances, O'Neal says, the program improves and increases productivity of the land.

O'Neal emphasizes that farmers can make better use of the materials and services provided under ACP by looking ahead and making plans well in advance of actual operations. Where scarce materials are needed, orders should be placed early enough to assure delivery. Arrangements also should be made early for needed services such as those requiring dirt-moving equipment.

Beginning now to plan for the coming year's conservation gives time for more complete, better balanced and more effective use of ACP, according to O'Neal.

Armed Robbery Probe Continues

State Police and authorities of Frostburg are continuing an investigation into a reported armed robbery in that community Wednesday morning at Jay and Arts Confectionery, 237 East Main Street, in which $175 was taken.

According to the owner, Jay Robertson, 35, of 240 Center Street, the unmasked trio entered the store about 9:30 a.m. and demanded his money. He said he handed over $175 and the men tied him up in a rear room before leaving.

Robertson quoted the men as saying, "We want your money." One of the men was armed with a gun, it was reported. Investigation disclosed $35 in an open cash register was not disturbed. The robbers were described as "young white men."

State police and Frostburg authorities were notified by Robertson after he freed himself. Investigating the robbery is Trooper First Class William F. Baker, State Police, Trooper R. P. McGuire, Police Chief Benjamin Thomas and Officer Donald Griffith of Frostburg.

County Soil Conservation Plan Expanding

Agency Marks Tenth Anniversary In County

By ALBERT D. DARBY
News Staff Writer

The soil conservation program on Allegany County farms observed 10th anniversary Wednesday.

It was on November 14, 1941, that the Allegany County Soil Conservation District was organized to administer the program, financed jointly by the state and federal governments.

A five-man Board of Directors administers the program. In the 10 years since the program began here 10 different Allegany County farmers have served on this board.

Original Members

Originally, the board members were J. W. Hansel, Vale Summit; W. L. Frazee, Flintstone; C. U. Llewellyn, Rawlings; H. M. Gordon, Murley's Branch, and Charles Harvey, Frostburg. Of the five only Harvey still is a member.

In 1944, the first board change came when Ernest L. Slider succeeded Hansel. He continues as a member of the board. Then, in 1947, Wilbert Paul of Mt. Savage was appointed to succeed Llewellyn after the latter resigned. Later that same year Bradye Dolly, Flintstone, was elected in place of Frazee. The last changes occurred just a year ago when R. W. Ferguson, Union Grove, and Dale Mann, Piney Grove, were designated as replacements for Dolly and Gordon.

Four Presidents

Board presidents in the 10-year period have included Hansel, Frazee, Paul and now Ferguson. Of the five-man board two members are appointed by the State Soil Conservation Committee and the other three are elected by the county farmers themselves.

The Allegany County Soil Conservation District was founded under state law, which provides for such organizations for the conservation of soil and water. When formed, the county group was the eighth in Maryland. Today there are 23 such districts, including two in Frederick County. One of the Southern Maryland counties has no such soil conservation body but all the others are taking steps to save soil and water resources.

$1,900 Per Year

Actual operating expenses of the district are paid by the state at a rate of about $1,900 per year. These state funds enable the directors to buy trees for reforestation, pay traveling expenses of the directors and purchase equipment. Included among the equipment are two terracing machines, one Brillion grass seeder and a jeep.

The biggest cost however, the employment of technicians to advise the farmers about their soil conservation practices, is borne by the federal government.

First of these Federal employes in this county was William W. Nace, a soil conservationist connected with the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service. He continued in that capacity until 1944 when he moved to Oakland and became district supervisor for both Allegany and Garrett Counties. Today the soil conservationist in this county is Martin Gordon, who is assisted by Stuart Delbrook. Their office is now at 37 Washington Street, opposite the Court House.

Secretary of the county soil conservation district is County Agent R. F. McHenry.

RABBI SCHIMELMAN

Beth Jacob To Install New Rabbi

Ceremony Set November 25

Rabbi Joseph Schimelman will become the spiritual head of Beth Jacob Congregation Sunday night, November 25 at an installation ceremony at the synagogue on North Centre Street.

A native of New York City, 33-year-old Rabbi Schimelman has spent 10 years in the rabbinate in New York and the New England states.

He was graduated from Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary and Yeshiva University in 1939, and took his master's degree at Columbia University in 1942.

Rabbi Schimelman comes to Cumberland from Portsmouth, N. H., where he headed the New Hampshire clergy's Civil Defense program and was civilian chaplain of two military activities. Before accepting his New Hampshire post, he headed congregations in Watertown, N. Y., and West Haven, Conn.

An Orthodox Jew, he will become leader of the area's only Conservative congregation.

Rabbi Schimelman sees Conservative Judaism as the Jewish middle ground between traditional Orthodoxy and the newer Reform or Liberal Progressive Judaism, represented locally by B'er Chayim Congregation.

Beth Jacob was an Orthodox congregation until about two years ago, when its members agreed to modify and modernize their observances toward Conservatism. First rabbi of the newer Conservative group was Joseff Kratzenstein, whom Rabbi Schimelman will replace.

LaVale Acquires Water Systems

Two more small privately-owned water systems have been acquired by the LaVale Sanitary Commission, Chairman William D. Claus said yesterday.

Most recent addition was the Schoenadel Brothers Water System, which serves some 13 or 14 scattered homes in the Narrows Park and Park Heights areas. A deed for this purchase was filed yesterday in the office of the clerk of Circuit Court, Joseph E. Boden.

Claus said the commission will begin supplying these new users in several weeks.

About a month ago the Zeller Water System, serving about 40 new homes on Braddock Road, was purchased by the commission. Claus explained that about 1,400 feet of pipe were laid so that city water could be carried there. The new supply is already being enjoyed in the Zeller development on Braddock Road.

Some 750 homes in the LaVale area now are supplied with water by the commission.

Court Trial Set Today In Will Dispute

A suit seeking to break the will of a Garrett County man who died three years ago is scheduled for trial today before a jury in Allegany County Circuit Court.

Associate Judge George Henderson is scheduled to preside in the removed case.

The caveat action first was brought in Garrett County Orphans Court by Pearl Bray Wilson, June D. O'Donnell, Virginia Bray Michael, Anna Bray Miller, Roy Cosner, all nieces and nephews of the late Richard B. Bray. Defendants in the suit is Lewis C. Bray, brother and executor of the estate of Richard B. Bray.

The nieces and nephews filed a petition in the same court seeking to break the will. They charged that the will was not signed by Richard B. Bray in the presence of witnesses, was procured by undue influence, that he was not of sound mind at the time, that the will was procured by fraud and was not Bray's last will and testament.

In April, 1950, the nieces and nephews appealed the case to Garrett County Circuit Court. Anna Bray Miller, one of the caveators, moved April 17, 1951, to have the case removed to another court.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs are Stuart F. Hamill, Jr., Neil C. Fraley and Walter W. Dawson, all of Garrett County, and Earl E. Manges, this city. Defense attorneys are William R. Offutt and Asa T. Matthews, Garrett County, and Albert A. Doub.

Mahoney Hits Snag Trying To Promote Harmony Among Democrats

[By The Associated Press]

George P. Mahoney is finding a few road blocks in his carefully mapped route toward harmony among Maryland Democrats.

Mahoney, the Maryland Democratic National Committeeman, found himself face to face with these developments last night:

A blast from H. Street Baldwin, leader of the Baltimore County Democratic organization, who accused Mahoney of using the "harmony theme to build himself up as a candidate for governor."

An announcement by Mayor Julius L. Tubman of Cambridge, that he would seek the Democratic nomination for Congress from the First (Eastern Shore) Maryland District, came on the heels of a Mahoney-sponsored effort to find a candidate on whom all Shore Democrats can agree

Both Baldwin and Tubman were Mahoney supporters in Mahoney's unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor last year.

Baldwin's attack on Mahoney apparently stemmed from an announcement by Mahoney that he would hold a meeting in the Second District — Baldwin territory — in an effort to settle on a Democratic candidate there.

"He never mentioned it to me," said Baldwin. "Of course, he can come in here and hold his meeting. But I don't know how constructive it will be."

The Baldwin organization is believed to be supporting Del. A. Gordon Boone (D-Balto) as its choice to unseat Rep. James Devereux, the Republican incumbent, in the Second District.

"Why he's no more interested now than he was when he was campaigning last year. That was when he was running around making wild charges against Governor Lane. Was that harmony?"

Tubman's announcement yesterday that he would run for Congress followed a meeting of Eatsern Shore delegates, senators, and State Central committeemen called by Mahoney Wednesday night at Easton for the purpose of agreeing on a candidate.

Tubman told a reporter that "I am definitely a candidate for Congress providing my health permits me to conduct a vigorous campaign."

One legislator who attended the Easton meeting said Tubman had very little chance of support from the group that gathered there. Even the Dorchester County delegation, the source said, would not commit itself to Tubman's support.

Those at the Easton meeting favored either State Senator Turner (D-Queen Annes) or State Senator Mason Shehan (D-Talbot,) but they deferred making a choice pending a second meeting on Dec. 5.

Mahoney's position was that the Republican incumbent on the shore, Rep. Edward T. Miller, would be hard to beat under any circumstances, and that Democratic chances will be better if all factions can agree on a candidate without a primary fight.

Mahoney said he plans a similar meeting in the Sixth (Western Maryland) District next Monday night in Hagerstown. A Republican, Rep. Glenn Beall, now holds the Sixth District seat but he had indicated that he would seek the U. S. Senate seat instead of seeking reelection.

Amvets Urge Use Of Atom Bomb In Korea

Would Withdraw All UN Troops

Local Amvets last night called for removal of all United Nations troops from Korea and for use of the atomic bomb against Red Chinese forces.

Robert F. Baker, commander of J. Louis Wolford Post No. 1, said members reached unanimous agreement on the resolution after reading published reports of Red murders of some 5,400 American prisoners of war.

"Now that we know they have murdered more than 5,000 of our men," said Baker, "there's no point in hesitating to use the atom bomb."

Earlier yesterday, President Truman told reporters, at his winter White House at Key West, Fla., that while he had received no official confirmation of published reports, he felt the murders to be the most uncivilized thing to happen in the last century.

The President would not say whether this bringes closer the day when we might use the atomic bomb in Korea.

Baker said the resolution would be drafted in the form of a letter to state Amvets headquarters for forwarding to national headquarters. He said it would bear his signature and that of James McFarlane, post adjutant.

Several months ago, former National Commander Harold Russell suggested much the same sort of retaliation against the Reds, but Baker said the local post was to the best of his knowledge the first to make a formal suggestion of this type.

At last night's meeting, the post also discussed plans for the observance of the 10th anniversary of Pearl Harbor on December 7 with a ceremony before the City Hall honor roll.

William B. Orndorff, national executive committeeman, reported on the status of the current membership campaign.

Is Part Of Civil Defense Program

Red Cross home nurse instructors met last night to discuss plans to step up the home nurse training program in the county, Mrs. W. Lee Witherup, executive secretary of the local Red Cross Chapter, announced.

The step up in training will be in connection with the Civil Defense Department which has requested that 150,000 people receive training in taking care of the sick throughout the United States.

The Red Cross has been designated by the Civil Defense as the organization to teach home nursing in Allegany County.

The Allegany County Commissioners have given the Red Cross a room in the second floor of the Union Street County Building. This room will be used as a class room for teaching home nursing courses.

Already the Red Cross has transferred and set up home nursing equipment necessary for the course.

The local Red Cross Chapter has 13 qualified home nursing instructors who are registered nurses and have taken the Red Cross training.

Mrs. Raymond Boare is chairman of the home nursing committee, and Mrs. L. J. Daum and Mrs. Grace Wallis are in charge of supplies.

Mrs. Witherup said there have been five home nursing classes taught in the county since last February in which 97 people received home nursing certificates.

Classes will be open to the public. No fee will be charged for the instruction except for the cost of text books,

Mrs. Witherup said persons interested in taking the home nursing course may obtain full details by calling the Red Cross office at 4181 or contacting Mrs. Boare at 3168-J.

Old Newspapers Displayed At Cumberland Library

Consequently, despite the fact that this is National Book Week, Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian, has arranged an exhibit of old newspapers rather than books in the show case this week.

Historical Records

After all, Miss Walsh recalls, old newspapers are historical records just as much so as the history books.

Featured in the display is a copy of the Maryland Gazette, published in Annapolis June 17, 1794. Emphasizing the historical importance of this paper, Miss Walsh notes that it lists the names of officers in the Maryland Militia who were called out to quell the Whiskey Rebellion of that year. On that occasion George Washington, still president of the United States, donned his uniform for the last time and came to Cumberland to review the troops.

An arrow on this old newspaper points to the name of Daniel Cresap, a lieutenant-colonel from Allegany County.

This same paper carries an anecdote on the French Revolution which was nearing its end at that time. It reports the names of three Frenchmen who died on the guillotine. "Two behaved with great fortitude but the latter showed great sign of weakness," the paper states.

Farmers Begin Plans For 1952 Conservation

Better Arrangements Urged By PMA

Allegany County farmers, like others all over Maryland, are looking ahead and planning their farming operations to make the best possible use of assistance to be provided under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program, according to Albert O'Neal, chairman of the Allegany County Production and Marketing Administration committee.

Through the Agricultural Conservation Program, the individual farmer and the nation are co-operating in a program of protecting and building the soil and water resources so that current defense needs can be met without reducing the land's productivity. In most instances, O'Neal says, the program improves and increases productivity of the land.

O'Neal emphasizes that farmers can make better use of the materials and services provided under ACP by looking ahead and making plans well in advance of actual operations. Where scarce materials are needed, orders should be placed early enough to assure delivery. Arrangements also should be made early for needed services such as those requiring dirt-moving equipment.

Beginning now to plan for the coming year's conservation gives time for more complete, better balanced and more effective use of ACP, according to O'Neal.

County Soil Conservation Plan Expanding

Agency Marks Tenth Anniversary In County

By ALBERT D. DARBY
News Staff Writer

The soil conservation program on Allegany County farms observed 10th anniversary Wednesday.

It was on November 14, 1941, that the Allegany County Soil Conservation District was organized to administer the program, financed jointly by the state and federal governments.

A five-man Board of Directors administers the program. In the 10 years since the program began here 10 different Allegany County farmers have served on this board.

Original Members

Originally, the board members were J. W. Hansel, Vale Summit; W. L. Frazee, Flintstone; C. U. Llewellyn, Rawlings; H. M. Gordon, Murley's Branch, and Charles Harvey, Frostburg. Of the five only Harvey still is a member.

In 1944, the first board change came when Ernest L. Slider succeeded Hansel. He continues as a member of the board. Then, in 1947, Wilbert Paul of Mt. Savage was appointed to succeed Llewellyn after the latter resigned. Later that same year Bradye Dolly, Flintstone, was elected in place of Frazee. The last changes occurred just a year ago when R. W. Ferguson, Union Grove, and Dale Mann, Piney Grove, were designated as replacements for Dolly and Gordon.

Four Presidents

Board presidents in the 10-year period have included Hansel, Frazee, Paul and now Ferguson. Of the five-man board two members are appointed by the State Soil Conservation Committee and the other three are elected by the county farmers themselves.

The Allegany County Soil Conservation District was founded under state law, which provides for such organizations for the conservation of soil and water. When formed, the county group was the eighth in Maryland. Today there are 23 such districts, including two in Frederick County. One of the Southern Maryland counties has no such soil conservation body but all the others are taking steps to save soil and water resources.

$1,900 Per Year

Actual operating expenses of the district are paid by the state at a rate of about $1,900 per year. These state funds enable the directors to buy trees for reforestation, pay traveling expenses of the directors and purchase equipment. Included among the equipment are two terracing machines, one Brillion grass seeder and a jeep.

The biggest cost however, the employment of technicians to advise the farmers about their soil conservation practices, is borne by the federal government.

First of these Federal employes in this county was William W. Nace, a soil conservationist connected with the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service. He continued in that capacity until 1944 when he moved to Oakland and became district supervisor for both Allegany and Garrett Counties. Today the soil conservationist in this county is Martin Gordon, who is assisted by Stuart Delbrook. Their office is now at 37 Washington Street, opposite the Court House.

Secretary of the county soil conservation district is County Agent R. F. McHenry.

RABBI SCHIMELMAN

Beth Jacob To Install New Rabbi

Ceremony Set November 25

Rabbi Joseph Schimelman will become the spiritual head of Beth Jacob Congregation Sunday night, November 25 at an installation ceremony at the synagogue on North Centre Street.

A native of New York City, 33-year-old Rabbi Schimelman has spent 10 years in the rabbinate in New York and the New England states.

He was graduated from Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary and Yeshiva University in 1939, and took his master's degree at Columbia University in 1942.

Rabbi Schimelman comes to Cumberland from Portsmouth, N. H., where he headed the New Hampshire clergy's Civil Defense program and was civilian chaplain of two military activities. Before accepting his New Hampshire post, he headed congregations in Watertown, N. Y., and West Haven, Conn.

An Orthodox Jew, he will become leader of the area's only Conservative congregation.

Rabbi Schimelman sees Conservative Judaism as the Jewish middle ground between traditional Orthodoxy and the newer Reform or Liberal Progressive Judaism, represented locally by B'er Chayim Congregation.

Beth Jacob was an Orthodox congregation until about two years ago, when its members agreed to modify and modernize their observances toward Conservatism. First rabbi of the newer Conservative group was Joseff Kratzenstein, whom Rabbi Schimelman will replace.

LaVale Acquires Water Systems

Two more small privately-owned water systems have been acquired by the LaVale Sanitary Commission, Chairman William D. Claus said yesterday.

Most recent addition was the Schoenadel Brothers Water System, which serves some 13 or 14 scattered homes in the Narrows Park and Park Heights areas. A deed for this purchase was filed yesterday in the office of the clerk of Circuit Court, Joseph E. Boden.

Claus said the commission will begin supplying these new users in several weeks.

About a month ago the Zeller Water System, serving about 40 new homes on Braddock Road, was purchased by the commission. Claus explained that about 1,400 feet of pipe were laid so that city water could be carried there. The new supply is already being enjoyed in the Zeller development on Braddock Road.

Some 750 homes in the LaVale area now are supplied with water by the commission.

Court Trial Set Today In Will Dispute

A suit seeking to break the will of a Garrett County man who died three years ago is scheduled for trial today before a jury in Allegany County Circuit Court.

The caveat action first was brought in Garrett County Orphans Court by Pearl Bray Wilson, June D. O'Donnell, Virginia Bray Michael, Anna Bray Miller, Roy Cosner, all nieces and nephews of the late Richard B. Bray. Defendants in the suit is Lewis C. Bray, brother and executor of the estate of Richard B. Bray.

The nieces and nephews filed a petition in the same court seeking to break the will. They charged that the will was not signed by Richard B. Bray in the presence of witnesses, was procured by undue influence, that he was not of sound mind at the time, that the will was procured by fraud and was not Bray's last will and testament.

Court records indicate the Orphans Court judges split on the case.

In April, 1950, the nieces and nephews appealed the case to Garrett County Circuit Court. Anna Bray Miller, one of the caveators, moved April 17, 1951, to have the case removed to another court.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs are Stuart F. Hamill, Jr., Neil C. Fraley and Walter W. Dawson, all of Garrett County, and Earl E. Manges, this city. Defense attorneys are William R. Offutt and Asa T. Matthews, Garrett County, and Albert A. Doub.

Blood Mobile Monthly Visits Scheduled Here

50 Per Cent To Go For Armed Forces Use

The national Red Cross Blood Mobile has been scheduled for regular monthly visits to Cumberland beginning in January, Mrs. Harry Beneman, Allegany County Red Cross Chapter president, announced yesterday.

After months of preliminary preparation in perfecting an organization, the local chapter has officially designated an agency in the nationwide blood program by Carl Hile, general representative of the national organization for this area.

The first visit of the Blood Mobile here will be January 21 and 22. The blood center will be established in the large auditorium of Cumberland Aerie No. 245, Fraternal Order of Eagles. The lodge has donated the use of the large first floor room on North Mechanic Street.

Armed Forces Use

Mrs. Beneman said 50 per cent of the blood collected here would be used for the armed forces. She said the whole blood would be shipped from Johnstown, Pa., the regional blood bank headquarters, and within six days after it is received will be ready at the front lines of battle for use of the armed forces.

Mrs. Beneman explained that the blood collected here must first be sent to the Johnstown laboratory where it will be processed before shipment.

The other 50 per cent of the blood collected in the county will stay in the county for use by Memorial, Allegany and Miners Hospitals. This blood will be available to any person in the county who may need it and will be given free of charge, she said.

Mrs. W. Lee Witherup, executive secretary of the local chapter, said all persons who wish to sign up to donate blood may do so by visiting the Red Cross headquarters in the Post Office building or by telephone at 3556.

Mahoney Hits Snag Trying To Promote Harmony Among Democrats

[By The Associated Press]

A blast from H. Street Baldwin, leader of the Baltimore County Democratic organization, who accused Mahoney of using the "harmony theme to build himself up as a candidate for governor."

An announcement by Mayor Julius L. Tubman of Cambridge, that he would seek the Democratic nomination for Congress from the First (Eastern Shore) Maryland District, came on the heels of a Mahoney-sponsored effort to find a candidate on whom all Shore Democrats can agree

Baldwin's attack on Mahoney apparently stemmed from an announcement by Mahoney that he would hold a meeting in the Second District — Baldwin territory — in an effort to settle on a Democratic candidate there.

"He never mentioned it to me," said Baldwin. "Of course, he can come in here and hold his meeting. But I don't know how constructive it will be."

The Baldwin organization is believed to be supporting Del. A. Gordon Boone (D-Balto) as its choice to unseat Rep. James Devereux, the Republican incumbent, in the Second District.

"You know what Mahoney's doing?" Baldwin asked. "He's running for governor three years from now."

"Why he's no more interested now than he was when he was campaigning last year. That was when he was running around making wild charges against Governor Lane. Was that harmony?"

Tubman's announcement yesterday that he would run for Congress followed a meeting of Eatsern Shore delegates, senators, and State Central committeemen called by Mahoney Wednesday night at Easton for the purpose of agreeing on a candidate.

Tubman told a reporter that "I am definitely a candidate for Congress providing my health permits me to conduct a vigorous campaign."

One legislator who attended the Easton meeting said Tubman had very little chance of support from the group that gathered there. Even the Dorchester County delegation, the source said, would not commit itself to Tubman's support.

Those at the Easton meeting favored either State Senator Turner (D-Queen Annes) or State Senator Mason Shehan (D-Talbot,) but they deferred making a choice pending a second meeting on Dec. 5.

Mahoney's position was that the Republican incumbent on the shore, Rep. Edward T. Miller, would be hard to beat under any circumstances, and that Democratic chances will be better if all factions can agree on a candidate without a primary fight.

Mahoney said he plans a similar meeting in the Sixth (Western Maryland) District next Monday night in Hagerstown. A Republican, Rep. Glenn Beall, now holds the Sixth District seat but he had indicated that he would seek the U. S. Senate seat instead of seeking reelection.
